Hiss Jury Fails to Agree, Is Locked Up

Truman Says He's 'Bullish' On Business Prospects

Stocks Take Dip, But Then Recover After His Remarks At News Conference

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday said he was "bullish" on the general economic situation in the United States. Talking to reporters at a White House news conference, he called their attention to the rise in stock market prices.

(A bull, in the colloquial sense, has an optimistic attitude on the course of events, especially business.)

Mr. Truman's expressed bullishness had a curious effect on Wall Street. Stock prices had advanced slightly early in the day. But soon after the President's remark went out over the wires, prices began to dip, the decline ranging from a few cents to around a dollar a share.

Late in the day, however, demand revived and the market closed with a fairly even mixture of gains and losses.

The Chief Executive indicated he has about given up hope Congress will meet his request for a bill to raise four billion dollars in new taxes.

"Mr. President," a reporter said, "John McCormack (House Majority Leader) said last night over the radio that he didn't think there would be a tax bill this year. Do you agree with him?"

Well, Mr. Truman replied, McCormack ought to know, since tax bills have to originate in the House.

"Are you convinced," he was asked, "that deflationary forces have outweighed inflationary forces?"

Mr Truman said he would answer that in his mid-year economic report to Congress, expected to go to Capitol Hill Monday. In this report, based on a review by his Council of Economic Advisers, he will appraise the state of the Nation's economy.

Also, he is expected to make known whether he has changed his views on a tax bill and to advise Congress of the Administration's plans for dealing with unemployment.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, in an interview in Paris yesterday, reflected Mr. Truman's bullish attitude. He said he had complete confidene in the soundness of the economic situation in the United States. The country need not fear, he said, that it is

Griffith Fires Pitcher Haefner

President Clark Griffith of the Nats fired Pitcher Mickey Haefner for "indifferent performance" in fielding an easy tap during Boston's five-run first inning in last night's game at Griffith Stadium.

Haefner was removed from the game before the inning was over, and Griffith announced that "Haefner has pitched his last game for us." He will be sold, traded or released outright, Griffith said. In the shower while the game progressed, Haefner denied "ever dogging it" for the Nats. "Let the fans judge me themselves," he said.

Victim's Trousers Studied

FBI to Help Solve Slaying In Maryland-Virginia 'War'

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

The FBI yesterday was called into the Maryland-Virginia "border war" to determine whether or not the slain Maryland crabber was killed by a gun fired at close range during a struggle.

The rookie conservation officer who admittedly fired the fatal shot, 26-year-old David Acree, surrendered to Virginia authorities on a murder warrant yesterday morning. He then was freed on $10,000 bond, but three hours later was lodged indefinitely in the Accomack County jail on advice of his attorney.

Maryland is seeking to extradite Acree to the Free State, where another warrant also names him as the slayer of Earl Nelson, 50-year-old crabber and father of seven.

Trousers Being Studied

The FBI is examining Nelson's trousers for powder burns or smudges, evidence the fatal shot was fired at close range—as would be probable in a struggle.

Virginia authorities in taking Acree into custody were making certain he would not have to go to Maryland, at least not while popular feeling there is inflamed over Nelson's death.

"It would be suicide to send that boy up to Maryland now," one Virginia official told a reporter, "the way feeling is running there. No jail on Maryland's Eastern Shore would hold him. The man would be walking into a death trap."

Acree, a Virginia special deputy, told reporters yesterday when he first surrendered to Virginia authorities that "at the time Nelson was shot he was under arrest. The shooting was accidental and took place while Nelson was resisting arrest."

Crabbers Tell Story

Virginia's State Fisheries chief, Charles M. Lankford, earlier had said Acree's rifle went off as Nelson tried to pull the deputy to the bottom of Nelson's boat.

But Maryland eyewitnesses deny the Acree version of the shooting, and the FBI's help was sought in an effort to determine the truth.

Ten of the Marylanders, Nelson's fellow crabbers from the Crisfield area, have given affidavits to Somerset County (Md.) State's Attorney E. McMaster Duer. They say a Virginia State Fisheries Commission plane landed in their midst Tuesday morning.

They admit they probably were then in Virginia waters—forbidden by law to Marylanders—but argue that watermen from both States have long ignored the lines.

The eyewitnesses contend that

5 'Put on Ice' In Robbery; Suspect Held

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A bandit suspect who held up an Acme grocery at 1652 Columbia rd. nw. at the 6:30 closing hour last night, herded five employes and customers into an icebox, took $287.50 and then was caught in a basement a block away after he attracted attention of passers-by.

Police said after the capture by Pvts. Ernest G. McClanahan and John P. Gerardi that the cases of two recent daring opening-time holdups of Safeway grocery stores in the district were "closed."

The suspect, booked at the Tenth Precinct Station, gave his name as Edward Watkins Hoffler, 41, butcher, of Portsmouth, Va.

Loaded Cart With Groceries

The Acme store he held up was being passed at the time by a flood of early evening traffic.

John Lieb, 3203 10th st. nw., manager, and Mrs. Anna Tobin, 3033 16th st. nw., who was checking customers out of the self-service establishment, said the man entered about 6 p. m., and fumblingly shopped for groceries at the rear of the place until 6:30. Then, with a basket-cart loaded, he approached the check desk.

Two customers and four employes were in the place. The front door had been latched and customers were being allowed exit as they completed checking and paying. As the man approached the check desk, he drew an automatic pistol and told Mrs. Tobin to "give it all to me."

She opened the cash register, whereupon he ordered her to put the money into a paper sack. He would not touch the money, she said.

Herded to Back of Store

Lieb, sensing something wrong, hastened to the front of the store where he, too, was confronted with the gun. The bandit made him open the safe and, as before, put the money into a paper sack.

Then the robber directed Mrs. Tobin, Lieb and two customers toward the back of the store. The

D. C. Dailies At Odds on Home Rule

Spokesmen for Post, News Urge Quick Approval; Others Ask National Vote

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

District home-rule legislation drew widely varying reactions from spokesmen for four Washington newspapers in a House hearing yesterday.

Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, indorsed the Senate-approved home-rule bill, and urged House approval for it at this session. He said it would give an "important measure" of the local suffrage which is "the keystone of our American system."

B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star, said the Senate measure was a very good bill, one that he could not oppose since it provides for submitting the home-rule issue to a referendum. But he said he was skeptical of the success of home rule without national representation for the District.

"Amendment Necessary"

Frank Waldrop, editor of the Washington Times-Herald, said he felt the District suffrage problem could not be solved short of a Constitutional amendment granting national representation. He said the pending bills "don't mean anything so far as home rule is concerned." When asked if he supported them, he said "Oh, I don't care—a locally elected city council would make good newspaper stories but it wouldn't improve the District government."

Milton Berliner, Capitol Hill reporter for the Washington News, said his paper had been in favor of District home rule for 25 years, and "it doesn't want to delay action any longer by taking up more of your time."

Three Denounce Bill

Their testimony was presented to the House District Judiciary Subcommittee in a two-hour hearing at the Capitol. Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said the date of the next hearing would be announced later, but he indicated it may await completion of the Washington Board of Trade home-rule poll of its members.

Three other witnesses sharply opposed the home-rule legislation—C. Melvin Sharpe, president of the District Board of Education testifying, however, as chairman of the Committee of One Hundred of the American Planning and Civic Association; Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers' Association, and Jerome B. McKee, legislative representative of the District Department, American Legion.

Another witness, David Whatley, Washington attorney, said he favored home rule, with the additional provision that District residents be allowed voting rights in Maryland congressional elections. He suggested that could be made possible by joint action of Con-

Federal Agent Accuses Funk

Signatures Laid to Defendant In Kentucky Vote Fraud Trial

Lexington, Ky., July 7 (AP).—"I reached the conclusion that certain of the signatures on the ballots were written by A. E. Funk, jr."

A Federal agent put this testimony into the record today in the trial of the Bourbon County election fraud last November.

Funk, a young Lexington attorney, is one of the defendants. E. F. Prichard, jr., 34, his law partner and once a right-hand man to key New Deal personnel, is the other. They are charged with conspiracy to forge 254 ballots. Both pleaded innocent.

The Federal agent is Walter G. Blackburn, for more than 14 years assigned to the laboratory of the FBI. Said Blackburn:

"After examining and comparing the handwriting on the back of the ballots with known specimens in the exhibits. . . . I reached the conclusion that certain of the signatures on the ballots were written by A. E. Funk, jr."

The exhibits he mentioned were introduced today by the Government. It claimed they were samples of Funk's handwriting.

The prosecution contended in its opening statement Funk wrote "practically all" the names of precinct election officers on the bogus documents.

The defense counsel voiced objections to the handwriting testimony.

For the most part Federal Judge H. Church Ford overruled their protests.

There was a lengthy conference

Not Expected to Run in Fall

Dewey Names John F. Dulles To Senate for Five Months

New York, July 7 (AP).—John Foster Dulles, 61, Republican foreign affairs expert and a leading architect of the Nation's postwar international policies, was appointed to the United States Senate today by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

He will serve five months until December 1 as successor to the veteran New Dealer and Democrat, Robert F. Wagner, 72, who resigned June 28 because of ill health. Wagner was author of the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

A special election will be held November 8 to choose a Senator to serve out the remainder of Wagner's term from December 1, 1949, to January 3, 1951.

Both Dewey and Dulles himself indicated that the new Senator will not run as the Republican nominee in November. However, statements of GOP Senators in Washington, who praised the selection highly, indicated Dulles would be under pressure to do so.

Dulles said he will go to Washington at once. There will be 53 Democrats and 45 Republicans in the Senate after he takes the oath.

The Senate now is debating the Atlantic Pact. Dewey said this was one of three momentous issues in international affairs before Congress which induced him to name Dulles.

The shirt-sleeved Governor, announcing his selection in a few words to newsmen at his suite in the Hotel Roosevelt here, said: "The great importance of the foreign affairs issues before the Senate at this time made his appointment the greatest contribution I could make."

In addition to the Atlantic Pact,

Dewey mentioned military aid to western European nations and appropriation of adequate funds for the European Recovery Program as problems on which "fateful decisions" must be taken at this session of Congress.

The Governor said it was unlikely Dulles would be the GOP nominee in the November 8 special election.

Dulles' present view, Dewey explained, is that after this congres-

New Clews Aid Silver Spring Firebug Hunt

Information Given By Neighbors Points To 'Definite Suspect'

New clews support the theory that a firebug touched off the lumber yard fire in Silver Spring on Monday, Silver Spring Fire Marshal George Tavenner said yesterday.

Questioning of neighbors and others has produced evidence "pointing to a definite suspect" who apparently started the fire with matches and sawdust or shavings, Tavenner said. He refused to divulge further details.

Tavenner also reported that estimates of damage to the Silver Spring Building Supply Co., Inc., have been revised downward from $400,000 to $200,000.

The fire marshal said the lumber yard suspect is not the hobo being sought in connection with the $500 fire in the nearby Morningside Laundry & Dry Cleaning Co., 8220 Georgia ave.

A bearded, dark-skinned Negro was seen loitering near the cleaning plant shortly before a blaze was discovered in a rack of garments. The fire was confined to the clothes.

Montgomery County police sent a lookout notice to police stations in Maryland, northern Virginia and Washington for this suspect, described as 35 to 40, 5 feet 9 inches tall, stockily built and weighing about 160 pounds, wearing dungarees and a dark shirt.

Kaye, McNutt On Airliner During Mishap

New York, July 7 (U.P.).—Actor Danny Kaye, chewing gum and spitting wisecracks, arrived here tonight with 52 other passengers after a close call aboard a Pan American Stratocruiser 600 miles out over the Atlantic.

Kaye, along with Paul McNutt, former War Manpower Commission chairman, arrived on a Pan American plane on their second try at crossing the Atlantic today.

A Pan-American Stratocruiser, with 53 persons aboard, was forced back to Shannon, Eire, earlier today because one of the plane's engines caught fire.

The four-engined Pan American Airways' sleeper plane landed safely after hours of terror, during which a propeller burned off and fell into the sea and passengers donned lifejackets and prepared

Handful Opens Fight to Block Atlantic Pact

Flanders Surprises Senators by Saying He Will Vote 'No'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

After two days of complete silence, a small band of Senate opponents yesterday launched a hopeless fight on the North Atlantic Security Pact.

A surprise recruit cleared the way for their attack by announcing he will vote against the pact unless it operates with an international police force as a "Little United Nations."

The unexpected critic was Senator Ralph E. Flanders, world-minded Vermont Republican. His speech touched off the first real exchange between friends of the pact and opponents. Later, Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) delivered the second major speech against the treaty.

Fears Arms Race

Until the last moment, supporters of the program had hoped to win over Donnell. Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) even insisted on a quorum being called to hear his decision.

Donnell told the Senate he could not support the pact because he regards it as a moral commitment to supply arms to Europe over a 20-year period. Instead of a "war deterrent," he said it could actually become the "stimulant to an armament race."

A third opposition speech will follow today from Senator Watkins (R., Utah) and a fourth by Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) will be delivered Monday.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), confident of an overriding two-thirds majority for ratification, yesterday suggested the Senate vote Monday.

Offers To Cooperate

Senate Republican Leader Wherry (Nebraska) countered with a proposal to vote Tuesday or Wednesday, but offered to "cooperate" with Lucas toward an earlier decision.

Wherry, whose own vote on the treaty has been in doubt, told newsmen the debate may be prolonged a day or two because of House plans to proceed with an arms bill immediately following Senate ratification of the pact.

"That upset some of the Senators, who feared the Administration would do just that," said Wherry. "We'd been assured here that one wasn't dependent on the other."

The Republican leader conceded, however, that neither Flanders'

Serious Differences Settled

Army Wins Fight for Greater Air Support of Ground Troops

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army and Air Force quietly have reached what both believe is a satisfactory settlement of serious differences over air power.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, has given Army chiefs assurances that greater emphasis will be given to tactical aviation in future Air Force planning and operations.

The issue—that the great current stress placed on strategic air power by USAF leaders has resulted in neglect of aerial support of ground forces—was formally raised several weeks ago by Gen. Jacob L. Devers.

Devers, commander of the Army Field Forces with headquarters at Fortress Monroe, Va., came to Washington and asked for a full hearing by Gen. Omar N. Bradley and the Army General Staff. After listening to his case, Bradley arranged for Devers to give his "presentation" before General Vandenberg and the USAF staff.

The Army chief of staff fully supported his subordinate's stand and accompanied him to the Air Force session.

"The substance of what I told them was that something must be done to improve the present situation on tactical air," Devers states.

He emphasized in an interview that there was no "squabbling" over the matter and that Vanden-

10 Men, 2 Women Report Inability To Agree at 10:30; Resume at 10 A. M.

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, July 7.—A Federal jury tonight weighed the evidence of a six-week trial to determine if Alger Hiss committed perjury or is a wrongly accused model citizen.

The spectacular perjury case went to the jury at 4:20 p. m. Six hours and 10 minutes later, failing to have reached a decision, they were ordered "locked up" for the night after Foreman Hubert E. James reported:

"I see no immediate verdict."

Judge Samuel H. Kaufman directed the marshal to take them to a hotel "to start afresh tomorrow morning" at 10 a. m.

Taken to Hotel

They were escorted to the Knickerbocker Hotel, off Times Square, where United States marshals were placed on guard outside their quarters.

As the trial came to a close this afternoon, Hiss was portrayed by the defense as a pillar of righteousness in his former work in the State Department, while the prosecution castigated him as a "traitor" and compared him with "Judas Iscariot . . . Maj. Gen. Benedict Arnold."

At the time the jurors reported their failure to agree they had had the case for more than six hours, but had spent about an hour and a half of that period at dinner.

Hiss Leaves Smiling

Hiss, smiling but making no comment on the developments, left the courtroom arm in arm with his wife, Priscilla, shortly after the jury had been placed in custody of deputy marshals for the night at a hotel.

Physically absent, but present in word and fact as the foundation of the Government's charges, was Whittaker Chambers, admitted former courier for a Communist spy ring in which he says Hiss willingly participated.

Judge Samuel H. Kaufman, in an hour-long charge to the jury of 10 men and 2 women, instructed them:

If you do not believe "beyond a reasonable doubt" Chambers' charges that Hiss supplied him with secret State Department documents in early 1938, then you "must acquit the defendant."

If you believe Chambers, "but do not find corroboration" for his charges, Hiss must be acquitted.

If you believe Hiss, you must acquit him.

Slayer Beats Md. Hanging By Suicide

Baltimore, July 7 (AP).—Roy Arnold Wood, convicted murderer, committed suicide in his cell tonight less than 90 minutes before he was to have been hanged, authorities reported.

Maryland penitentiary officials said Rev. Joseph J. Ayd, S. J., was saying the prayers for the dying outside the cell about 10:30 p. m. He noticed Wood was not responding.

Father Ayd called guards, who found Wood bleeding from the throat. A prison doctor pronounced him dead. He said there was an internal laceration in Wood's throat. The weapon used was not determined.

Wood, who killed a Baltimore policeman last year, was to have been hanged with Howard A. Fram, 32-year-old Kensington (Md.) baker's helper, who beat a Baltimore grocer to death with a hatchet in a robbery.

Both were to have been executed shortly after midnight.

Fram and eight other condemned men sat silent and dazed while authorities were working in Wood's cell.

At 12:25 a. m., Fram walked silently to the gallows, and the trap was sprung. He was pronounced dead at 12:40 a. m.

Republicans Reach Farm Compromise

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Republican members of a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee virtually agreed yesterday to a compromise farm program including features of both the Brannan Plan and the Aiken law.

As described by the senior Republican member, Senator George D. Aiken (Vt.), the compromise would amount to an amendment to the present farm law stating that "three-fourths of the Brannan Plan is now in operation."

The unexpected and startling proposal would retain Title II of the present law, otherwise known as the Aiken Section, which will go into effect next January 1.

Production Payments

However, it would be amended to give Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan power to support the prices of 8 to 10 farm products by production payments—a prime feature of the Brannan Plan.

Under production payments, growers of certain perishable or nonstorable farm products, would be paid the difference between the market price of those products and the support level.

At present, prices of certain farm products are maintained at a certain level (mainly 90 per cent of parity) through Government loans and purchases.

Under the production payment scheme, consumers would buy at a lower price, and the Government would make up the difference.

The agreement came suddenly, near the close of the first day's hearing on the Brannan proposal by the Senate subcommittee headed by Brannan's predecessor as Agriculture Secretary, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

Other Republicans taking part in the all-day session, which was marked by extreme friendliness on all sides, were: Milton R. Young (N. D.); and Edward J. Thye (Minn.). Absent were Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Ia.) and James P. Kem (Mo.).

Besides Anderson, Democrats taking part were Committee Chairman Elmer Thomas (Okla.), Clyde R. Hoey (N. C.), and Spessard L. Holland (Fla.).

90 Per Cent of Parity

The hearing brought out several surprises. Foremost was the denial by Aiken that the Aiken portion of the present law, Title II, which becomes effective next year, provides for lower price supports than at present.

Instead, he declared, it was intended to provide for 90 per cent of parity, the same as Title I, or the Hope portion, that is now in effect.

The so-called sliding scale of the Aiken law, the author declared, was put in merely to give the Secretary of Agriculture power to reduce the support level of farm commodities at his discretion.

Under the new proposal, as under both the Brannan Plan and the Aiken law, the prices of corn-cotton, wheat and tobacco would be supported as at present.

The commodities coming under production payments would include whole milk, chicken, eggs, hogs, beef cattle, and lambs, and probably potatoes and turkeys.

Limits Funds Available

The Aiken portion of the present law would allow such payments, but restricts them by limiting the funds available to those received from Section 32. (Section 32 funds are a portion of the custom receipts set aside for the benefit of agricultural commodities.)

To put the proposed compromise into effect, the Aiken law would be amended to permit the use of Commodity Credit Corporation funds and borrowing capacity to finance production payments.

One proposal is that instead of limiting production payments to a list of commodities, that the Secretary of Agriculture be given discretion to apply them to any commodities.

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) urged that citrus fruits be included if any list were voted. Aiken pointed out that under the Aiken law as now written, the Secretary will have power to support the price of citrus fruits and other perishable commodities by the purchase of storable products processed from them. This would include canned orange and grape fruit juices, as well as canned vegetables and deciduous fruits.

The features of the Brannan Plan not included in the new program are:

1. A proposal to tie price support payments to soil conservation and good farming practices.

2. The limitation of support payments to only 1800 units for each farm. A unit would be the equal of 10 bushels of corn, 7.77 bushels of wheat, 52.16 pounds of cotton, etc.

Anderson ruled both these out on the grounds that he wishes to "hear from the farmers first."

Anderson pointed out that the Aiken and Brannan proposals, as far as this year is concerned, would bring the farmers about the same return. Under the Brannan plan, for instance, wheat would be supported at a level of $1.88 a bushel, against $1.85 in the Aiken Law.

"The main difference," Aiken remarked, "would be the philosophy of the Brannan plan against the price support philosophy of the present law."

"Some people think," Aiken added, "that the Brannan plan will greatly change the course of American agriculture."

"I'm not insisting on the Brannan plan as such," Brannan replied. "I'm asking for the best possible farm plan for the best good of agriculture and the Nation."

The political aspects of yesterday's developments were widely discussed as the result of the committee's session. Aiken's interpretation of the so-called sliding scale of Title II cuts much of the ground out from under the American Farm Bureau Federation's attack on the Brannan plan.

Republican support for the Aiken Law has been based on the fact that it means lower price supports. Aiken completely repudiated that theory.

GOP Policy Group Considers Farm Plan

The Senate Republican Policy Committee met Wednesday to consider a farm program, but adjourned without any announcement.

It was stated that Senator Aiken and other Republican farm leaders have been invited to consult with the committee at its next meeting.

Girl, 14, Drowned

Slaying Laid To 3 in Death At Baptism

Kingsport, Tenn., July 7 (AP).—The drowning of a 14-year-old girl while she was being baptised in the Holston River near here last May 1 has resulted in the arrest of three persons on charges of murder.

Margaret Chapman drowned shortly after being immersed by her grandfather, Franklin W. Lewis, 53, a Holiness preacher.

Arrested and arraigned yesterday besides Lewis were Howard Smith, 38, of Bristol, and Edna King, 34, of Kingsport. A preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday.

The warrant for Lewis' arrest charged felonious, willful and unlawful drowning "while in the act of baptism in the Holston River under dangerous conditions . . ."

Lewis said he, the girl and Smith were standing in the river when all three suddenly went down. The girl was last seen alive floating downstream. Heavy rains had made river currents treacherous.

Former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has been mentioned most frequently as the Democratic nominee in the special election this fall.

Edward J. Flynn, Democratic National Committeeman, and Paul E. Fitzpatrick, the party's State chairman, called on Lehman today and urged him to run. He promised an "early answer."

Mentioned as possible GOP nominees have been William J. Donovan, wartime head of the Office of Strategic Services; Congressman Frederick R. Coudert and W. Kingsland Macy, and Mary H. Donlon, chairman of the State Workmen's Compensation Board.

The formal nominations will be made at meetings of the party State committees, probably in September.

President Truman said in Washington at his news conference that he plans to take no part in the election fight.

The appointment gives New York State two Republican Senators for the first time since 1922.

Dulles has attended every session of the United Nations General Assembly as a United States delegate since the world organization was founded. He also has served as Republican representative at the various meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers. Both Presidents Roosevelt and Truman selected him for these jobs.

Physician Legislator Attacks Health Bill as 'Poor Insurance'

Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday attacked the President's program to better the Nation's health as "a poor insurance policy for American people."

The 82-page legislative bill, he told members of the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce, "is spotted with such phrases as 'insofar as possible' and 'where facilities will permit.'"

"How far would a commercial insurance company get in this country if it filled its policies with such qualifications," he declared rather than asked.

Dr. Miller, a physician, said he had no fault to find with some portions of the voluminous National Health Insurance Bill. These, he said, include those parts providing financial help in hospital construction, medical teaching and expansion of public health services.

But these, he said, "might be called the sugar-coating of the program."

"Don't let anyone tell you it isn't socialized medicine, and don't let them tell you it isn't compulsory," he said in luncheon address at Hotel Burlington.

Nowhere in the whole 82 pages, he complained, did he see the word "compulsory."

Really Compulsory, He Says

"But that doesn't mean it isn't compulsory," Miller declared. "Under the bill, every one of you will pay the payroll tax, whether you carry your own prepay insurance, or whether you are Christian Science, or what."

Miller said that though he was against the Administration health program, he wasn't against its aims, "to provide better health for the people."

"Some doctors," he said, "do charge too much. Some won't make night calls, and some don't spend enough time with their patients."

For his part, he said, he favors his own bill which asks a comprehensive study of the whole situation.

New Summons Form Adopted By Fay Office

The United States Attorney's office here yesterday began use of a new form to summons persons for hearings in that office.

The new style informs the recipient:

"A complaint has been made to this office, charging you with . . . The purpose of this letter is to afford you an opportunity to appear at (time and date) in Room 116, Municipal Court, Criminal Division, to confer with . . ., Assistant United States Attorney, and to make any representations in your own behalf which you may wish."

It is signed by United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

The old style, used for the last 12 years, informed the recipient:

"The President of the United States to ..... You are hereby commanded to appear at the office of the United States Attorney, Room 116, Municipal Criminal Court Building, 5th and E sts. NW., ... (date) at ..... (time) to confer with ..... Assistant United States Attorney, on behalf of the United States and do not depart without leave of the District Attorney."

It was signed by Harry M. Hull, clerk.

Fay had no comment yesterday on the new form other than to say it represented a routine administrative change. He would not say whether it will replace the old form completely or whether both will be used.

Pending in District Court is a suit, filed by Mrs. Mary Peretti, 515 3d st. nw., challenging the authority of the old form and ordering Fay to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court for issuing it.

London, July 7 (U.P.).—Laborite Member of Parliament Frank Medlicott today suggested that the Health Ministry issue microscopes instead of spectacles to butchers so they could cut their customers' weekly ration of 24 cents worth of meat properly.

ALF Butchers Sign Pact For Free Eye-Glasses

New York, July 7 (AP).—Under a new work contract, more than 2000 AFL butchers and members of their families will get eye-glasses free—if they need them.

The contract providing for eye tests and free glasses was signed yesterday by the butchers Local 174 and the meat trade institute, representing 100 wholesalers.

Joseph Cohn, the institute's attorney, said he didn't know of any particular eye hazard connected with the butchers' trade, but that the union simply asked for the glasses provision, "and we gave it to them."

2 Jaycee Officials Honored at Dinner

Davis

Speakers who paid tribute to the Junior Chamber's cooperation on civic projects included George E. Keneipp, Traffic Director and Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew. Frank Luchs, chairman of the Community Chest, discussed plans for the next fund-raising drive.

The dinner was given by the Burlington Hotel, headquarters for many Junior Chamber meetings, in recognition of its "superlative work for the city," Hudson S. Moses announced.

Handwriting Study Told

at one stage of the proceedings over objections to a Government question the defense contended was prejudicial to Funk. Judge Ford sustained this view.

Blackburn said he had compared handwriting specimens of 68 persons against the signatures on the forged ballots.

"I reached the conclusion none of the handwriting (on the ballots) was written by any of the individuals except A. E. Funk, jr.," he said.

The 68 included Bourbon County officials, employes and election officers. Among them was Prichard, an officer in the Clintonville No. 3 Precinct where the fraud first was uncovered.

FBI Agent John W. Core earlier testified he went to the University of Kentucky here to get samples of Funk's handwriting.

Core said the university and its law college produced specimens of Funk's handwriting on cards and examination papers. He was not asked pointedly if he had sought samples from Funk himself.

In his opening statement, U. S. District Attorney Claude Stephens declared it had been "difficult" to obtain specimens of Funk's handwriting.

Core testified in Federal Court today that the samples of Funk's penmanship were sent to the FBI laboratory in Washington. He said he obtained samples of handwriting from about 50 Bourbon election officers and sent them to Washington. Some of these officers testified yesterday their signatures were on ballots they did not sign.

Stephens has said the Government will prove Funk signed "a number, a large number, in fact practically all" the 254 phony ballots.

The Government finished its questioning of Bourbon election officials today. It has been brought out that William T. Baldwin, Bourbon County attorney and a close friend of Prichard's, had access to the key of the vault which contained the ballot books prior to the election. It has also been stated that the flaps over the drop slots on the ballot boxes were not locked before the election.

Funk is the son of Kentucky's Attorney General. Prichard was an aide to top Washington officials in the New Deal. His father is a member of Kentucky's Legislature.

The irregularities occurred in the national election of last November 2. All 254 of the ballots were marked for President Truman and 253 for Virgil Chapman, victorious Democratic candidate for the United States Senate. One ballot was marked for John Sherman Cooper, Chapman's unsuccessful Republican opponent. Chapman lives in Bourbon County.

Boy Hanged In 'Initiation' Into Club

By Teen-ager

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—A member of the teen-age "Hang Noose Club" today told police a 3-year-old boy was hanged accidentally in a test of a scaffold for a club initiation.

The oral statement given Detective Chief Timothy O'Connor by Robert Munday, 15, was the second account police obtained about the killing of Thomas "Whitey" Laux.

A few hours earlier Robert's 13-year-old brother, Charles, gave a statement that he strangled and hanged Tommy in a quarrel over a kitten and stuffed the body into a sack, where it was found this morning.

Both pupils of a school for backward children, Robert and Charles are being held without charge at a juvenile detention home. O'Connor said Charles had been classified as a juvenile delinquent.

O'Connor said: "I believe Bobby's story because the finding of the rope on 49th st. corroborates it. Charles' story does not stand up."

The boys' parents took lie detector tests and O'Connor said they failed to show anything. O'Connor said police will continue to hold the parents without charge.

Crude insignia and chalk writing indicating the cellar of the house had been a hangout for teen-agers prompted police to turn their investigation toward the Munday boys.

Above the door to the basement there was written in chalk, "Hang Noose Club." Inside police found a cardboard shield, marked with grisly characters and bearing an "honner roll." The roster read:

VP2 . . . Pike, Patrick, Billy . . . (a skull and crossbones drawn her).

SW3 . . . Bob Walsh . . . (a hatchet drawn here).

Behind the name of Charles Munday police found a drawing of an inverted tear or blood drop embracing several symbols too small to decipher.

O'Connor said Robert gave this account of the killing:

Robert made a noose about a week ago for initiation rites. Last night Robert invited Tommy into the basement, telling him he would be let into the club.

Robert strung a piece of clothesline over a ceiling rafter and asked Tommy to stand on a box. Next he persuaded the little boy to slip the noose around his neck.

By accident the box fell and Tommy lunged forward, strangling.

SAILS FOR HEALTH—Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, rests in his cabin after boarding the liner De Grasse in New York yesterday. Welles Sails For Rest in Switzerland

New York, July 7 (AP).—Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, sailed today for a stay in Switzerland to "try to get my health and strength back."

The former diplomat still is pale and weak from his brush with death last winter. He collapsed on a midnight walk last December near his Oxon Hill, Md., home, fell into an icy stream, and was not found for several hours.

Welles, walking with a cane and accompanied by his wife, boarded the French liner De Grasse. He was stooped and was unable to shake hands with friends who saw him off. He said his hands had been affected by his accident.

"I am coming along slowly but surely," Welles said. He expects to be in Switzerland about two months.

He declined any comment on world affairs.

Resumption of his newspaper column will depend on how his health comes along, he said.

One British Objector Not Too Conscientious

Birmingham, England, July 7 (U.P.).—C. B. Clarke, an 18-year-old shipping clerk, today told a Birmingham court he objected to military service on religious grounds.

The judge asked him how many commandments there were.

"Twelve," Clarke replied.

Italian Police Quiz Luciano In Dope Ring

Rome, Italy, July 7 (U.P.).—Charlie (Lucky) Luciano, onetime New York vice lord, was picked up by Italian police today and questioned about a narcotics smuggling ring operating between Italy and the United States.

Luciano was seized at his comfortable apartment in Rome's Parioli district. A woman with him also was taken to police headquarters, but police refused to identify her.

Luciano was questioned for several hours while police searched his apartment. He and the woman were then released.

Police said they had tried to discover a possible connection between Luciano and an Italo-American identified as Vincent Trupia, of New York, who was arrested at Rome's airport 10 days ago carrying half million dollars worth of cocaine.

A police official said, "We did not establish any link between Luciano and Trupia."

Georgia Fugitive To Have Hearing Today on Return

A hearing on a writ of habeas corpus, sought by Lewis Kalap, 42, of 503 3d st. nw., in his fight against extradition to Georgia to answer a burglary charge, will be held at 10 a. m. today before District Court Judge David A. Pine.

Kalap, who was arrested by the police fugitive squad here, was ordered returned to Georgia yesterday by Judge Jennings Bailey.

His attorney, Phillip Shapiro, immediately petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus, charging Kalap was jailed in Ocilla, Ga., January 5, 1948, and held there without a preliminary hearing, indictment or trial until he escaped November 3, 1948, and was the victim of "cruel, barbaric and inhuman" treatment.

Boys' Club Honors J. Edgar Hoover

Stonemasons Get 25-Cent An Hour Raise

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Eighty-five AFL stonemasons yesterday won a 1949 contract with a 25-cent-an-hour increase in pay. They will get $3.00 an hour.

Union leaders in the building trades said the immediate effect of the substantial wage raise would be to stiffen the backs of striking AFL carpenters and building laborers, who walked out June 1 in a demand for pay raises.

The carpenters, who have been getting $2.40 an hour, struck for 10 cents more; the laborers, who were receiving $1.35, want 15 cents more.

The stonemasons' contract with the Stone Contractors Association expired June 21. The employers' group sought to hold out against a pay raise, according to Carl O. Romborg, spokesman for the association, but finally agreed to the new terms out of "sheer desperation."

Strike of the carpenters and building laborers was aimed principally at the Master Builders Association and a loose federation of subcontractors known as the Construction Contractors Council.

The Stone Contractors Association has been affiliated with the Construction Contractors Council and Romborg has been a member of the latter group's labor committee.

"The stone contractors had to give in to the wage demands of the stonemasons," Romberg said yesterday, "in order to save the stone masonry industry here.

AB&W Firm and Union Report No Progress

Representatives of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. and its employes' union met all day yesterday, but reported no progress toward a new contract.

The union—Local 1131 of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes—is asking a 30-cent-an-hour wage increase, a pension plan and other benfits for 500 bus operators and maintenance workers.

The present contract expires July 20, and the union has served notice it will strike unless its demands are met.

Present at yesterday's discussions, besides labor and management, were Virginia Commissioner of Labor and Industry Edmond M. Boggs and Federal Mediator Gilbert S. McCutcheon. Talks are scheduled to resume today.

Ching Calls for Peace Talks In Steel Contract Dispute

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching yesterday summoned representatives of United States Steel Corp. and the United Steel Workers (CIO) to a conference here Monday in an effort to head off a threatened Nation-wide steel strike.

Ching stepped into the dispute soon after Union President Philip Murray announced in Pittsburgh that contract talks with United States Steel have been broken off. Murray accused the company of failing to make a genuine effort to bargain.

The meeting here will precede by two days the union wage policy committee meeting in Pittsburgh at which a formal strike date is expected to be set. Ching is hopeful of heading off any precipitate action that might result in a walkout.

The company has turned down union demands for a general wage increase, an insurance program and a $150-a-month pension plan.

Murray already has said there appeared to be no hope of a mutually satisfactory agreement.

Under the Taft-Hartley Law, Ching could advise President Truman that a strike impends which threatens the Nation's welfare and safety. Mr. Truman then could create a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute and, upon getting its report, seek an injunction to prevent the strike for 80 days.

Ching declined to comment on this possibility, but Government officials left little doubt that they would regard a steel strike as an emergency warranting use of the injunctive weapon.

Anderson Heads Wheat Council

Britain's F. Sneed Anderson yesterday was elected chairman of the international wheat council.

Anderson, who is an official in the British government's Ministry of Food, was elected to serve for the 1949-50 crop year.

The election of the council's vice chairman for the same period and of a permanent secretary general was referred.

T-H Repeal Bid Up to House

President Truman yesterday said he still wants the Taft-Hartley labor law repealed this year, but that it is up to House leaders whether another try is made.

The leadership is considering whether to bring it up again or let it ride until 1950, a campaign year. Top labor chieftains already have given up hope for this year and announced they will make it an issue in the elections.

Mr. Truman told a news conference he hopes the House bosses will decide to make another try. An earlier repeal bill in the House was sent back to committee after it became riddled with amendments.

The Senate recently passed a labor bill which turned out to be a 1949 model of the present Taft-Hartley Act.

Despots Run Unions, Pegler Tells House

By The Associated Press

Columnist Westbrook Pegler said yesterday American unions have become loaded with "despots, criminals and Communists" who use violence to beat off attempts at reform.

Testifying before a House Labor Subcommittee, Pegler said one man who protested was "murdered."

He identified the victim as William Bruce Zigler, a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers, formerly headed by Joe Fay and William Malone.

The syndicated New York writer, who says much of his fan mail is addressed "Dear Sir, you cur," told the committee rank and file members have "little or no voice" in many unions. But the bosses, he said, handle "millions upon millions of dollars" in union treasuries and spend it "for any purpose they choose."

The sharp-tongued critic of labor's shortcomings spent an hour and a half in the witness chair, alternately mild and glittering of eye as he recited wrongs he said were suffered by working men and women. His testimony bristled with such epithets as "thief," "swindler," "czar" and "Hitlerian" —all referring to union leaders.

Prodded by Chairman Jacobs (D., Ind.) for "names aand factual information" in the midst of his discourse, Pegler retorted:

"It takes a pretty courageous man to let his name be made public."

The columnist said he would have to get permission from the individuals involved before he could give their names to the committee. Most of the union members who have complained to him, he said, "live in fear" of having their names disclosed.

Much of Pegler's testimony was a repetition of alleged misdeeds by union officials which has been printed in his columns over a period of years.

Pegler suggested that the committee send an investigator to go over what he called a "great treasury of information" in New York, relating to union practices.

But Chairman Jacobs remarked that the committee is operating "on a shoestring," and he cracked:

"If we asked for another appropriation, it might make material for a column, eh?"

"It might," Pegler grinned cheerfully.

The columnist and the committee chairman, a former Indiana labor attorney, faced each other with polite restraint before a battery of news cameras and reporters.

Before being subpenaed to appear before the House group, Pegler had taken several swipes at Jacobs in print. On June 17, he wrote:

"I don't know what kind of a labor lawyer Jacobs is, but I don't know any good ones."

Yesterday, Jacobs read from another Pegler column, dated June 16, in which the columnist wrote that "Jacobs doesn't need to waste another dollar of our money investigating union practices. He need only ask me."

Jacobs then leaned back, and in a frosty tone, directed Pegler:

"Proceed. You have the undivided attention of this committee."

Pegler began by reading a prepared statement in which he charged criminals and Reds have "infiltrated" American unions and now run them.

Pegler said he has received "hundreds of letters from rank and file members who have been kicked out of their unions, lost their jobs, or threatened physically because they attempted to reform the unions."

The columnist brought forward one witness for the committee.

He introduced her as Mrs. Helen Kulesha of the Bronx, New York City, a member of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

As Mrs. Kulesha excitedly came forward, Pegler told the committee the union had revoked her vacation privileges because she objected to a $7 union assessment for the United Jewish Appeal from her $21 weekly salary.

Another woman garment worker who lost $45 vacation money, Pegler testified, was Ella Young, Jackson Heights, N. Y. She was not present.

Both women offered to contribute $3, Pegler told the committee, but were told it was not enough.

Member Is Fined $50 For Union Campaigning

Atlantic City, N. J., July 7 (AP).—The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters (AFL) yesterday fined one of its members $50 for "violation of the union's constitution." Another member was placed on "probation" for four years.

Harry Gill of East Liverpool, Ohio, press spokesman for the group, said the constitutional violation charged against the men consisted of traveling through Tennessee, Ohio and Pennsylvania distributing handbills opposing the reelection of union president James M. Duffy of East Liverpool.

Duffy has been president of the union for 22 years.

Gill said the group placed George Crossen, East Liverpool, on probation for the four-year period. Ray Hammond, Steubenville, Ohio, was fined $50. The actions followed "conviction" and "sentencing" of 10 other union members on similar union charges.

The 212 delegates attending the union's annual convention have finished an eight-day closed-door trial of the 12 accused members. The convention now will get down to its normal business sessions, also behind closed doors, ending Saturday, Gill said.

Six members were barred for 10 years from taking any active part in the affairs of their local unions. These six were charged with violating the union constitution by taking to an Ohio court a suit challenging pay increases for top union officials.

Four others were charged with "malicious political activity" for campaigning against Duffy. They were each fined $50.

Moves Begun Here to Act in Hawaii Strike

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Action to do something about the 69-day-old Hawaiian longshoremen's strike shaped up in several quarters yesterday, although President Truman maintained his hands-off attitude.

There were these developments during the day:

1. Attorney General Clark informally approved a suggestion that Hawaii seize its port facilities and put striking longshoremen under civil service. Such action would require approval by President Truman and it would have to be ordered by the Hawaiian Legislature.

2. President Truman told his news conference he contemplated making no move whatever and denied that conditions existing in the islands warranted using his powers to act in a national emergency.

3. The House Committee on Un-American Activities voted to look into communism in Hawaii, but to wait until the long and costly strike has ended. Committee members said it would make no investigation while the strike is on in order to avoid charges of strike-breaking.

4. Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) proposed legislation which would empower the President to order the strikers back to work for 80 days under Taft-Hartley law provisions while negotiations were continued. At present this provision applies only to strikes in the United States itself.

Asked at his news conference about the Knowland proposal, Mr. Truman said he didn't know whether he wanted such powers

The President was first asked if he contemplated making any move in the Hawaii strike. He replied he contemplated none whatever; that there was no move he could make.

"When the Taft-Hartley repeal debate was going on," a reporter pointed out, "there was a lot said about the President having a lot of inherent powers to settle such strikes."

The President had the power, Mr. Truman said, to intervene when the welfare of the Nation was at stake, or where there was a breakdown in communications between the States, or when there was a difficulty between the United States and foreign nations. But, he continued, none of those cases existed in the Hawaiian strike.

In Honolulu, according to the Associated Press, both sides to the labor dispute which has sealed off the half-million residents of Hawaii from sea communication with the mainland, were cool to the Knowland proposal.

Cargo on Strikebound Ship Ordered Seized

Honolulu, T. H., July 7 (U.P.). Federal Judge J. Frank McLaughlin tonight signed an order for the United States marshal to seize the Matson freighter Hawaiian Citizen for the removal of vitally needed cargo from the strikebound ship.

Marshal Otto Heine indicated that he would seize the ship Friday to remove 2500 tons of tinplate for pineapple cans which the American Can Co. petitioned the court to release to prevent large losses resulting from ripening fruit.

Trial of Judy And Gubitchev Put Off to Fall

New York, July 7 (U.P.). — The trial of Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev on espionage charges was postponed today until October 15. It had been scheduled to begin on July 11.

Federal Judge William Bondy granted the adjournment after both Government prosecutors and Archibald Palmer, Miss Coplon's lawyer, requested it.

Attorney Raymond P. Whearty, one of the prosecutors in Miss Coplon's Washington trial, said both the prosecution and defense were ready to begin the trial on Monday.

But, he said, the United States Attorney's office in New York announced that no judges would be available on next Monday or during the summer months.

Whearty asked the court to postpone the trial until October 1 and Palmer asked that it be delayed to November 1, since he will plan to argue an appeal of Miss Coplon's Washington conviction during October. Then Judge Bondy set October 15 for the trial opening without prejudice to a later request by Palmer for further adjournment.

Miss Coplon seemed in cheerful spirits at today's hearing. She was sentenced to 3 1/3 to 10 years for espionage at her Washington trial. She and Gubitchev, a Russian engineer she says was her sweetheart, have been indicted on four counts charging a conspiracy to transmit vital American documents to a foreign power.

Gubitchev was employed by the United Nations at the time he was arrested. He was suspended later.

Court Asked To Set Bond For Axis Sally

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday was asked to free on bond Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, now serving a 10-to-30 year sentence for treason in connection with wartime broadcasts over the Nazi radio.

In a petition for bail filed in the appellate court yesterday, James J. Laughlin, attorney for Miss Gillars, pointed out that Judy Coplon was freed on $20,000 bond pending appeal.

Miss Coplon was convicted here last week on charges of removing Government data with the intent to injure the United States by giving it to Russia. A former Justice Department employe, she is under a 40-month to 10-year sentence.

Laughlin cited the Rules of Criminal Procedure as holding that "bail may be allowed pending appeal . . . only if it appears that the case involved a substantial question which should be determined by the appellate court.

The attorney maintained that "substantial questions" are involved in Miss Gillars' case such as "the force of duress." Throughout the trial, Miss Gillars had contended she was forced to broadcast for the enemy.

Of Miss Coplon, Laughlin declared in his petition, "she stands convicted of a most heinous offense" which, he added, could have had the effect of "destroying our whole Government."

Laughlin would not comment yesterday on a letter Miss Gillars had written to District Court last April to the effect she was dropping him as counsel.

Trimming His Toenails Fatal to Californian

Oakland, Calif., July 7 (AP).—The coroner's office today reported the strange case of a man who wounded himself fatally trimming his toenails.

Tokyo Rose's Letters Read

San Francisco, July 7 (AP).—Reading of documents bearing on the citizenship of Mrs. Iva Toguri (Tokyo Rose)) d'Aquino interrupted testimony in her treason trial today.

The Government seks to establish that Mrs. d'Aquino is a citizen of the United States. The defense contends she no longer is a citizen.

Mr. D'Aquino was indicted for treason because of her wartime broadcasts from Tokyo to American soldiers.

Special prosecutor Tom De Wolfe read letters she had written to United States officials asking permission to return to the United States and asserting she never had renounced her American citizenship. Others told of what she described as her "small aid" to Allied prisoners of war.

Jury in Hiss Case Locked Up for Night

been substantiated, then "you may find Hiss guilty" on both counts of the indictment.

In the two perjury counts against him, Hiss was charged with lying when he denied to a Federal grand jury last December 15, that he supplied Chambers with documents for the spy ring in February and March, 1938, or that he saw Chambers after January 1, 1938.

At that time, Hiss was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

Hiss, now 44 years old, later went on to participate in the Yalta Conference, was secretary-general of the United Nations Charter Conference at San Francisco, and in 1948 became $20,000-a-year president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

About 15 minutes after the case was sent to the jury, the jury requested a copy of the indictment against Hiss, with the explanatory bill of particulars; the documents allegedly transferred to Chambers plus the State Department originals, and the former Hiss typewriter on which the Government alleges the papers were copied.

The jury went to dinner at 5:55 p. m., and returned to their deliberations at 7:10 p. m.

Judge Kaufman told the jury the case presented a "simple issue,' but the case itself was "most unusual."

He instructed them to disregard, as far as is "humanly possible," the deluge of newspaper, radio and television comment on the case since it first splashed into public print last August 3 with Chambers' first charges before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

His and his 45-year-old wife, Priscilla, stared intently at the judge as he gave the charge. Behind them, resting his chin on his arms cradled on a railing, Mrs. Hiss' son by her first marriage, 22-year-old Timothy Hobson, seemed equally intent on the judge's words.

Throughout the trial, both Hiss and his wife have retained an unusually composed appearance. Today as Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy ripped at Hiss' character in a three-hour summation of the Government's case, Mr. and Mrs. Hiss stared sternly ahead, their faces and necks reddening in unspoken anger.

"Someone has said," the 6-foot-4-inch tall prosecutor declared bitterly, "that roses that fester stink worse than weeds—and a brilliant man like this man (pointing to Hiss) who betrays his trust—stinks. Inside that smiling face, that heart is black and cancerous, he is a traitor!"

Contrasted with this was the high praise of Hiss by chief defense counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker. In the final hour today of his four-hour summation, which began yesterday, the gray-haired Stryker dramatically called out:

"This isn't a case—it's an outrage."

Stryker declared softly in closing the defense case:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the case will be in your hands . . . I have no fear, yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death in this case."

Turning to Hiss:

"Alger Hiss, this long nightmare is drawing to a close. Rest well. Your case, your life, your liberty are in good hands."

Judge Kaufman told the jury they could not convict Hiss on the second count of the indictment—seeing Chambers after January 1, 1937—unless they find him guilty on the first count—"furnishing, transmitting and delivering" documents to Chambers.

This, he said, is because the bill of particulars states that the transmission of the documents took place at the Hiss home on Volta pl., Georgetown. If they find him guilty on the first count, he said, they "may" find him guilty on the second count.

Conviction on each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $2000 fine.

The fate of Hiss, who completely denied any communistic associations and declares he knew Chambers only from late 1934 to mid-1936 as a free-lance writer, rests in large part on the typewriter and documents in the case.

Judge Kaufman told the jury that "as a matter of law, I instruct you that there is no excuse or justification of perjury."

He told them Federal law requires either two witnesses to prove an act of perjury, or one witness and corroborating facts. The judge noted that the Government concedes it has produced no other witness to the furnishing, transmitting or delivery of documents to Chambers by Hiss and said this must clearly be shown by corroborating evidence.

The documents in the case which Chambers says he received from Hiss, Judge Kaufman declared, can be "circumstantial evidence."

But "circumstantial evidence," he said, "must not be merely consistent with the guilt of the defendant, but must also be inconsistent with reasonable doubt and must be susceptible of no reasonable hypothesis other than of his guilt."

In reaching its decision, he said, the jury should "bear in mind" that between 1939 and 1948 Chambers, under oath and not under oath, "made statements inconsistent with and contrary to his testimony here."

It is for the jury to decide, he said, if Chambers were telling the truth then or has told the truth at the trial here.

He pointed out that Chambers, until recently at $30,000-a-year senior editor of Time Magazine, first said he left the Communist Party in 1947, and later changed this to April 1938.

Also Judge Kaufman noted, Chambers first accused Hiss only of being a Communist, and did not produce the documents he says Hiss gave him until last November—during a $75,000 libel suit Hiss filed against Chambers in Baltimore.

Since Hiss chose to take the stand in his own defense, Judge Kaufman said, the jury must also weigh the credibility of his testimony in addition to that of Chambers. Neither of them, nor their wives, who also appeared, can be regarded as "disinterested witnesses," he declared.

In deciding if there is "reasonable doubt" of Hiss' guilt, however, he told the jury, "you should remember that the Government is not called upon to prove guilt beyond all doubt, or every possible doubt, or to a mathematical and absolute certainty . . ."

A man, he said, "may commit a crime even though he was theretofore a person of good character."

But, "if your minds are in a state of suspense," he stated, "you should acquit the defendant . . ."

The all-important documents in evidence conclude 65 typewritten pages, 64 of which an FBI agent has testified were typed on an old Woodstock typewriter owned by the Hisses.

This testimony was given by the agent after comparing the State Department copies with four papers the Hisses typed on that typewriter, the last one dated May 25, 1937.

The Hisses insisted they disposed of the Woodstock in December, 1937, while the State Department documents which Chambers charges Mrs. Hiss typed for her husband were dated through April 1, 1938.

The documentary evidence also included four handwritten memoranda—which Hiss admits are in his writing—and two strips of microfilmed copies of State Department documents.

Stryker declared today that "that letter of May 25, 1937, is the finest possible corroboration of the . . . testimony with regard to the disposal of the typewriter.

The FBI, he declared, made an exhaustive search of the country and could produce no later letter typed by the Hisses on the Woodstock machine than that one.

According to evidence here, said Stryker, three of the documents Chambers said he received from Hiss, "did not go to Mr. Sayre's office or to Mr. Hiss' office. In other words, he (Hiss) did not have the originals from which these papers were copied at all . . .

"He couldn't have made copies of these papers . . . in other words, ladies and gentlemen, when you look at this case it bursts at the seams."

"If there ever was a man in the world who has established a finer character than Alger Hiss," said Stryker, noting that his character witnesses included Supreme Court Justices Felix Frankfurter and Stanley Reed, "I do not know where that happened."

"Alger Hiss was a brilliant member of the State Department. Everywhere he's been and everything he's done and every trail he's left behind is clear."

Stryker, in his summation, made a new attack on the FBI for part of their role in the case, saying, "I'm not making a general attack on the FBI. I have a high regard for Mr. J. Edgar Hoover." But the FBI's "conduct in this case," said Stryker, "should not meet the approval of 12 free Americans."

Seizing on this angrily, Murphy declared, "you know, there's an old saying, that when you don't have the facts you knock the District Attorney's head off.

"Well, that has changed now—it's the open season on the FBI . . . It's the thing to do, it's the liberal approach."

Pounding the lectern with the flat of his hand, he shouted to the jury, that if they suspect the FBI in this case of anything that "was unfair in any wise . . . acquit this man! Acquit him! That's how confident I am that you won't be taken in by this sideswipe on the FBI!"

"If the Hisses did not type the 64 documents," Murphy shouted, "who typed these documents?

"If you caught a child "in the kitchen with jam on his face and you asked him if he was in the kitchen and he said no—what does your normal, everyday intelligence tell you?"

The 15 character witnesses who appeared for Hiss, shouted Murphy, "have nothing to do with this case—just the window dressing."

He said it was for the jury to decide "whether justices from the United States Supreme Court, with propriety, come into this courtroom. . . They of course, didn't know anything about the facts in this case, they told you what they had heard (about Hiss). . ."

Whittaker Chambers, Murphy recalled, has been characterized by the defense as a "moral leper." And, he said, "who was Whittaker Chambers? Why, he's the bosom pal of this defendant—Hiss. He (Chambers) is the man he (Hiss) gave his Ford to, he is the man he gave his apartment to, this moral leper."

Not once, Murphy said, has he been able to find out what the defense alleges was Chambers' motive in accusing Hiss. He ridiculed any attempt to suggest politics was the motive, for there was no reason "why Mr. Chambers would come forth with these documents unless it was true!"

British Drafting New Funds Plan

From Press Dispatches

London, July 7.—British experts began drafting an emergency economic program today on the eve of a United States-British-Canadian financial conference.

The new program, pointed toward greater economy in production and drastic cuts in imports from the United States, is designed to ease the drain in British gold and dollar reserves pending the development of a new over-all international scheme which, it is hoped here, America will back.

It was believed today that the British government expects the three-power negotiations, which will be followed next week by a meeting of the commonwealth Finance Ministers, to develop gradually into some sort of world economic conference in September at Washington. The annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank will be held there in mid-September.

John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury; W. Averell Harriman, American Ambassador at large; Douglas C. Abbott, Canadian Finance Minister; Sir Stafford Cripps, Chanellor of the Exchequer, and Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas will participate in the negotiations.

There were two incidental developments today. Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, a government department, announced that British imports reached an all-time high in June. Exports hit the second highest monthly mark since the end of the war. But they were short of imports.

Second, Wilson said in the Commons that Britain was preparing to take the lead in easing restrictions on trade among European Marshall Plan countries.

Another development was the unanimous lambasting which the Conservative press gave the statement Cripps made in the Commons yesterday on the financial situation.

Newspapers accused the Labor government of trying to preserve its "ark of socialism" at any cost. The influential financial Times even expressed hope for a political crisis to get the country out of the financial crisis.

Wilson disclosed that British imports of £201,500,000 (about 806 million dollars) against exports of £143,200,000 (about $572,800,000).

In his House statement, Wilson said:

"His Majesty's government believe that the time has come when it should be possible for both the United Kingdom and other countries to take steps to relax progressively their restrictions on imports from sources outside the hard currency area to the fullest extent consistent with safeguarding their balance of payments."

Quarter-Billion Cut In U. S. Exports Forecast

By The Associated Press

Paul G. Hoffman last night said the dollar-short British may cut their planned purchases of American goods by two hundred million dollars during the coming year.

The Economic Cooperation Administrator based his estimate on statements by Sir Stafford Cripps in London. The Chancellor of the Exchequer told the House of Commons Wednesday that the United Kingdom must make a drastic reduction in its dollar-consuming purchases to avoid bankruptcy.

Hoffman told a news conference ECA fully recognizes the seriousness of Britain's plight and its impact on the European Recovery Program.

He added:

"Only the British can save Great Britain. Anytime we can help Great Britain to do to quickly expand her exports will now have new meaning."

Hoffman said Britain originally had planned to buy about $1,600,000,000 worth of goods in the Western Hemisphere during the coming 12 months.

Changes Plans

Truman Now Wants to Cut Some Taxes

By Robert S. Allen
Post Reporter

Taxes will figure prominently in President Truman's forthcoming economic report to Congress—but not as before.

His demand for an additional four billion dollars in taxes will be dropped.

The President's new tax recommendations will be aimed at stimulating buying power instead of restricting it. This will be particularly true for low-income groups.

For these brackets the President will propose an increase in individual tax exemptions.

Also, while no direct reference to excise taxes is contemplated in his message, his position on this issue has changed. He now is agreeable to a reduction in these consumer taxes.

The President will stand pat on one major aspect of his previous tax program.

He will reiterate his demand for increased taxes on high income groups and corporations. He will contend they are absorbing an undue proportion of the national income and can well afford to bear a greater share of the tax burden.

The President again will cite the fact that the Eightieth Congress gave these groups appreciable tax savings, over his protest.

Outlaw Bomb, Mass Death, Russia Urges

Geneva, Switzerland, July 7 (U.P.).—Russia today urged the world to outlaw the atomic bomb along with bacteriological and chemical warfare and "other weapons intended for the mass extermination of populations."

A resolution submitted by Soviet Gen. Nicholas Slavin to an International Red Cross conference here declared that "it is the duty of the governments of all countries" to prohibit the use of "atomic weapons as means for . . . mass extermination."

The proposal was submitted to a committee of the 50-nation conference which has been in session here since April drafting the world's first agreement on protection of civilians in wartime. The committee referred the Slavin resolution to the full conference for consideration.

The conference is expected to complete its work late this month.

Higher Allotment To West Point, Annapolis Asked

The District Commissioners yesterday asked Congress to allot Washington 12 West Point cadets and 15 Annapolis midshipmen. The District now is allowed six cadets and five midshipmen.

Similar legislation to increase the allotments was presented to the last Congress but was sidetracked in committee.

In requesting approval, the Commissioners pointed out that 13 States, each with a smaller population than the District, all have from 12 to 16 cadets at West Point, and from 15 to 20 midshipmen at Annapolis.

Fund to Study Devaluations, Snyder Hints

By Russell Hill

Paris, July 7 (NYHT).—A revaluation of European currencies will be studied by the International Monetary Fund, United States Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder indicated today at a press confeerpce, after three days of talks with French monetary authorities.

This was the first confirmation of rumors that Snyder has been discussing exchange rates. He said: "On the question of exchange rate policy, it was agreed between Minister of Finance (Maurice) Petsche and myself that the International Monetary Fund provides the appropriate forum for international cooperation in this field."

The fund's experts are charged with reviewing the exchange rates of member countries and of recommending changes in the rates of any currencies that seem to be wrongly valued. It is understood that special attention will now be given to the currencies of a number of western European countries.

Some American officials believe devaluation of the pound and the French franc would help these countries reduce the prices of exports.

French officials are believed to favor a simultaneous readjustment of European currencies, including their own. The British have so far been outspokenly opposed to devaluation.

Snyder will fly to London Friday morning with W. Averell Harriman, roving Ambassador for the Marshall Plan, to confer with Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and with Canadian Finance Minister Douglas C. Abbott.

Snyder said Sir Stafford had proposed they survey not only immediate financial problems but also fortify basic policies of the recovery program which will contribute to the restoration of multilateral trade and convertibility.

In order to allay European fears that the American recession may develop into a full-fledged depression, Snyder quoted figures on the rate of income paid to individuals (214 billion dollars at the end of June), individual savings (200 billion dollars in cash, checking accounts, savings accounts and saving bonds), capital investment (75 billion dollars in the last four years), corporate cash working capital (65 billion dollars) and employment (up 875,000 in May over April.)

He explained the simultaneous rise in unemployment as being due to an increase in the labor force rather than an actual loss of jobs, and said purchasing power remained high.

Crisis Faces Gaullists

Paris, July 7 (U.P.).—The Gaullist movement was threatened with a crisis today when Paul Giacobbi, leader of a group of national assembly deputies pledged to support General Charles De Gaulle, quit the party.

Giacobbi resigned following a quarrel with De Gaulle and other leaders of the Rally of the French People (RPF). He objected to the expulsion from the movement of an Assembly deputy and three Senators who supported an anti-RPF candidate in a recent extra election. The anti-RPF candidate won.

Some six or seven other Gaullist supporters in the Assembly were expected to follow Giacobbi out of the party.

Truman Says He's Optimistic

headed for a devastating depression such as it experienced in the early 1930's.

In an article in Collier's magazine, Snyder blamed psychological factors for depression talk.

He wrote:

"I can tell you with sincerity and emphasis that the situation as I see it shows no substantial cause for anxiety. The uneasiness that is going around is in the minds and the emotions of men and not in the basic facts of business or of public finance."

The Treasury head listed five things to support his belief. He mentioned the 59 million persons gainfully employed at "good wages"; the absence of any bank failure for the past five years; the comparatively small rise in farm mortgages; the success of the latest savings bond drive; and the high level of personal income, which he estimated at about 215 billion dollars for 1949.

The President was asked about rumors he was planning a trip to Europe, with visits to London and Rome. He said he had no such plans and observed that some people seemed to know more about what he is going to do than he himself knows.

Asked whether he would take an interest in the 1950 election in his home State of Missouri, he said he certainly would. He might not intervene in the primary to select Democratic nominees, he said, but he would say what was on his mind in the general election.

The chief aim of Missouri Democrats next year will be to defeat Senator Forrest Donnell, a Republican. When Donnell was told yesterday of Mr. Truman's remarks, he said:

"I think it is perfectly proper that the President should take part in his home State election. It is perfectly agreeable to me if he does."

Business Inventories Dip Second Month in Row

Business inventories decreased $1,224,000,000 in May, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. A drop of $1,010,000,000 had been reported for April.

Seasonal fluctuation accounted for only about a fourth of the May drop, the department said. Lower prices had a part in shrinking the dollar total of inventories to $52,538,000,000 at the end of May, but there was a "sizable decline" in the physical volume of stocks as well, the department added.

Retail inventories at the end of May totaled $13,831,000,000. The department said that represented a three-million-dollar decline from April after adjustment for season variations.

Manufacturers' inventories totaled $30,823,000,000 and wholesalers' $7,884,000,000 at the end of May.

Steel Employment Off 9200 During May

New York, July 7 (AP).—Reduced production in the steel industry resulted in a decline of steel employment to a total of 637,400 in May, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

This was 9200 less than in the previous month, but still ahead of May, 1948, when total employment in the steel industry was 627,600.

For the first five months this year, the industry's payroll topped 979 million dollars for an increase of almost 105 million dollars over the same period last year.

Public Payrolls Carry 6,219,000

The number of Government employes—Federal, State and local—reached a three-year high in April, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. The total was 6,219,000.

Public payrolls rose to an unprecedented level of $1,375,000,000 in that month, reflecting higher pay as well as more employes.

Italy Expects To Balance Budget by '52

Rome, Italy, July 7 (U.P.).—Government financial experts said today Italy is winning its fight for economic stability and expects to balance the budget in 1952, when the Marshall Plan ends.

They cited the stabilization of Italian currency, a steady drop in expenses, and gains in revenue as evidence of progress.

Despite fear of the consequences if Britain eventually devalues its currency, experts were confident the Italian economy would weather the crises.

Treasury Minister Giuseppe Pella said that even if parity revisions are made for certain European currencies, "it will not affect the parity of the Italian lira with the dollar."

Finance Minister Ezio Vanonio said, "I do not believe a British currency devaluation would damage us seriously."

The budget deficit in 1948-49 was 480 billion lire (816 million dollars), with a deficit of 207 billion lire ($351,900,000) predicted for next year.

Income has grown from 812 billion lire ($1,370,400,000) total revenue in 1947-48, to 917 billion ($1,558,900,000) in the next year, with a predicted 1,322,000,000,000 lire income for 1949-50.

In the coming fiscal year Italy expects to cover 86 per cent of all expenses by revenue from taxes, State monopolies, etc. Marshall aid is not included. Last year, only 67 per cent of expenses were covered by revenue, only 50 per cent in 1947-48.

Soldiers, Tars Unload Beef In Dock Strike

London, July 7 (AP).—British tars and Tommies lugged Argentine beef for London tables off food ships in London docks today.

A strike described by Labor Minister George Isaacs as "nothing but a Communist maneuver" continued to keep nearly 100 ships idle.

A party of sailors and about 300 soldiers moved into the docks without opposition from the striking dockers. Their first objective was to carry about 3000 tons of frozen beef from the Argentine Star.

Weekend leaves for troops and naval units were canceled.

Some 250 more dockers stopped work to protest the unloading. This swelled to 8863 the number of men idle in the strike. In addition, 500 more workers adopted a resolution saying they would halt work if the troops were not withdrawn immediately.

Atom Bomb Output Now on Stable Basis

United States production of atom bombs now is on a stable basis and there has been "a complete model change" in the bomb since the Atomic Energy Commission took over the atomic program, Brig. Gen. James McCormack, director of the AEC's military application division, said yesterday.

He told the Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee that bottlenecks which previously had slowed bomb production have been broken down.

Meanwhile, Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) chairman of the joint committee, last night corrected a published report that he had told the hearing that this country had no atom bombs, or at the most one bomb, when the AEC took over control of the atomic energy program from the Army in 1947.

Chairman McMahon last night advised newspapers that he had intended to refer to the lack of bombs at the end of the war, not in 1947, and that he thought he was quoting an article by former Secretary of War Stimson published in Harper's Magazine in February, 1947. In that article, Stimson wrote that the two A-bombs dropped on Japan in August, 1945, were the only ones this country possessed, and the rate of production was "very small."

McMahon earlier yesterday introduced legislation requiring authorization from the Joint Congressional committee before the AEC embarks upon new projects.

The legislation introduced concurrently in both Houses by McMahon and by Representative Carl T. Durham (D., N. C.), vice chairman of the committee, would put the Atomic Energy Commission on the same basis as other agencies so far as money requests are concerned in that appropriations would be subject to a committee's authorization.

At present the commission is limited only by the amount of funds appropriated by Congress but uses them as it pleases.

McMahon and Durham emphasized that the bill has nothing to do with the committee's current investigation of charges of "incredible mismanagement" leveled at AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa).

Meanwhile, the commission revealed yesterday that only 2 of 497 students awarded atomic fellowships have refused to sign loyalty affidavits while 19 others have not been heard from.

The other 476 have signed the oaths.

Of the two who refused to sign, one resigned and the application of the other was canceled by the commission.

The commissioner refused to identify the two who did not sign.

AEC General Manager Carroll L. Wilson said that of the 19 from whom no answer has been received some may have changed their addresses. Professors in charge of these students' work have been notified, Wilson said. He made it clear that the AEC will grant no payments to any fellow who has not returned the oath.

The commission decided to require its atomic fellows to sign loyalty oaths after it came under congressional fire because it awarded a nonsecret fellowship to Hans Freistadt, 23-year-old Austrian-born Communist at the University of North Carolina.

The National Research Council, which supervises the fellowship program, mailed out the loyalty forms on June 1. It did not set any deadline for their return.

There were these other developments as Lilienthal continued his defense.

Kicked, Beaten

U. S. Official Arrested In Shanghai

Shanghai, July 7 (U.P.).—United States Vice Consul William Olive was "struck and kicked" and arrested yesterday by Communist-controlled police and is still being held on undisclosed charges, it was reported officially today.

Olive was arrested as he drove home during the three-hour parade which commemorated the founding of the Chinese Communist Party and the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese war. At the same time, former Chinese employes were picketing the consulate, demanding severance pay.

Consul General J. M. Cabot and 150 consular employes remained in the building until nearly midnight last night rather than buck the picket line, but today the pickets were removed.

[An Associated Press dispatch said Olive got entangled in a jam around the parade. Taken to the nearest police station, he accidentally knocked over an ink bottle during questioning. Interpreting this as "resistance," several policemen knocked him down and kicked and mauled him when he sought to defend himself. He then was handcuffed and thrown into a cell with several other prisoners.

[A member of the consular staff in China for several years, Olive is a graduate of George Washington University. He was married last spring to a fellow-staff member, Miss Margaret Gordon of Jamestown, N. Dak.

[Military censorship has been imposed by the Chinese Communists upon dispatches of foreign correspondents in Shanghai. Press messages now must go through military censorship and thus are delayed 1 to 12 hours in transmission. No censorship has been imposed on non-press messages.]

Japs Facing Sterner Rule

Tokyo, July 7 (U.P.).—Premier Shigeru Yoshida told the Japanese cabinet today he was prepared to proclaim a state of emergency if necessary to halt violence and unrest in Japan.

Yoshida said he considered the death of Sadanori Shimyama, head of the Government-owned railways, a "political scheme" to block an allied-inspired economy program, and said he was determined to suppress any further trouble. He also hinted that Communists were behind the death and other recent labor violence throughout the country.

Shimoyama's decapitated body was found on railway tracks near Tokyo yesterday just before 30,000 railway workers were discharged for economy reasons.

[The Associated Press said a violent demonstration by coal miners was added today to Japan's Communist-fomented labor disturbances. The United States Eighth Army reported 3000 miners at Takahagi, 75 miles north of Tokyo, demonstrated for several hours and held three mine officials prisoner because of the discharge of 200 miners.]

berg accepted his criticism in "good spirit."

"We received assurances that they will give us what we want," the Army Field Forces chief added. "I think they've changed their emphasis and things are going to work out all right."

Devers said he stressed the following major points in his appearance before the top staff officials:

1. Shortage of troop carrier aviation for training of airborne troops and infantry and armored forces in "air transportability." He asked for three full groups of new-type Fairchild Packets—C-119Bs—based largely in the Southeastern States where most of the combat divisions in continental United States are located. In the past the equivalent of only one troop carrier group has been available for such training continuously, he said.

2. Insufficient training in the close support of tactical aviation and ground forces. Particularly since the combat groups and supporting squadrons were taken away from USAF Tactical Air Command last December 1, suh "day-to-day" operations have been lacking. Devers said. Such joint training has been carried on only during scheduled field exercises and "demonstrations" for classes at service schools.

3. Lack of a satisfactory fighter-bomber for close support of ground operations. The Army, said Devers, needs a plane that can bomb and strafe enemy pillboxes, tanks, etc.; possessing these characteristics: ability to hover over the target; speed of about 450 miles an hour; ability to operate from short, rough airstrips, and what is called "endurance"—time in the air rather than range.

Present USAF jet fighters and light bombers stress very high speed and best performance at high rather than low altitudes, he said. They require long, prepared runways to take off and land—not likely to be available in battle areas.

4. Too few tactical air groups in the original Air Force allocation of the 48-group program. Devers did not go into detail on this point, but said he hoped the final setup would be satisfactory.

Some top USAF officers who have specialized in tactical aviation have privately agreed with Devers' stand. They disagreed with the decision transferring Tactical Air Command's combat and support units to a new higher echelon—Continental Air Command. The latter, under the present arrangement, has control of six Air Forces in the United States, and farms units out to TAC, Air Defense Command, reserve training, etc., for scheduled exercises.

However, tactical airmen in close touch with the current situation believe the new system will work out satisfactorily. They say programs now being shaped up reflect a more proper emphasis on tactical aviation. Types and number of planes coming along and training schedules for next year should meet Army needs, in their opinion.

Some recent intelligence reports on Russian air plans are understood to have influenced top Pentagon chiefs in supporting General Devers. Some earlier reports indicated the Soviet armed forces were deemphasizing tactical aviation in favor of strategic bombing and interceptor fighters. This may have been a factor in earlier USAF planning. But the latter reports were that the Red air force was not neglecting ground support of land forces—long its main function—in developing long-range bombers and high-altitude fighters.

General Devers made it plain he believes in the United States maintaining a strong strategic air force. His interest, he said, was in opposing too great an emphasis on global bombing at the expense of tactical aviation. The veteran soldier expressed high satisfaction with some of the very recent plans and training operations put on by Tactical Air Command.

"Air Force intentions and spirit of cooperation are fine," he said. "We're working well together. What we have now are assurances, not guarantees. But I think if we keep after them—keep bouncing them—things will be all right."

Other top officials expressed satisfaction not only that the differences between the Army and Air Forces had been resolved, but that it was done amicably.

House Group Rejects Plan for Civilian Head Of Chiefs of Staff, Shears Office of Power

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday rejected an amendment to the Senate-approved unification bill requiring that the proposed chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff be a civilian.

At the same time, however, the group voted to curb the powers of the man appointed to such a post. Representative Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the committee, had proposed both changes, to assure, he said, that "we'll never have a military dictator."

President Truman, meanwhile, moved into the dispute by declaring that it is perfectly absurd for anyone to fear that the Administration measure would lead to a dictatorship.

Critics of the Senate bill have charged that it would give too much power to both the Secretary of Defense and the proposed JCS chairman.

Former President Herbert Hoover, while indorsing the increased authority for the Secretary, hit the suggested power for the chairman as "dangerous." He declared the bill would make him in fact a "chief of staff over all the armed forces."

Mr. Truman was asked about the matter yesterday at his press conference. His questioner mentioned statements that the bill would make the Defense Secretary a dictator. Declaring the idea absurd, the President said it won't happen as long as the President is Commander in Chief of the armed forces.

In voting to slash the authority of the proposed Joint Chiefs chairman, the committee tentatively approved Vinson's amendment doing these three things:

1. The proposed chairman merely would preside over and not be a member of the JCS, as approved by the Senate.

2. He would take precedence over the three Joint Chiefs—the Army and Air Force Chiefs of Staff and the Chief of Naval Operations—only when presiding over the body. Under the Tydings bill, the JCS chairman would become the highest ranking officer of the armed forces.

3. The Joint Chiefs continue as the "principal military adviser" to the President and Secretary. This title, duty and responsibility would pass to the proposed chairman under the Senate bill.

As agreed to by the House committee yesterday, the proposed chairman could be either a military man or a civilian. But Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson made it plain that a top-ranking military man will be given the post.

During yesterday's session, the House committee also tentatively approved:

1. Transforming the National Military Establishment into the "Department of Defense," over protests of a minority that it meant "merger" of the armed forces. That is in the Senate bill.

2. Creation of three Assistant Secretaries of Defense, who would have precedence over the Assistant Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force. At present and under the Senate bill there would be only "special assistants" to the Secretary and his deputy.

The group also reached a general agreement on language requiring the Defense Secretary to "consult with the Senate and House Armed Services Committee before transferring or consolidating any of the statutory functions of any of the departments. It provides for such consultation only on questions of "substance" and permits written reports when Congress is not in session.

There was much discussion of another Vinson amendment — to curtail President Truman's authority under the new Government reorganization act to take action affecting the armed forces.

Johnson suggested that the committee merely state in its report that they felt that the reorganization job would be accomplished by the bill—without actually repealing such authority. He added that he had "nothing in mind" as far as revamping of the services is concerned beyond the present bill.

The Secretary also disclosed that existing Assistant Secretaryship in the Navy and Air Force will not be filled.

Poland Stops Trade With Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 7 (AP). Poland stopped all her trade with Yugoslavia today. The action was regarded here as part of a Cominform campaign of economic sanctions to oust Premier Marshal Tito's government. It came as no surprise.

For nearly a month, diplomats have been anticipating the Polish action, with a general expectation that Romania will follow suit.

Four of the seven Communist nations in the Cominform (the Communist International Information Bureau) now have no trade relations with Tito's government. Albania was the first to sever economic ties. Czechoslovakia was second and Hungary third.

Since the Cominform last year denounced Tito for deviating from the Communist Party line, Soviet Russia and her satellites have been gradually cutting trade to a trickle.

Yugoslav officials labe the bans "economic sanctions" with the implication the nations involved are taking orders from Moscow.

Dispatches from Warsaw said a Polish note handed Wednesday to Yugoslav Ambassador Rade Pribecevic charged Yugoslavia had sabotaged trade with the Poles and that the deliveries made were of no essential importance to the Polish economy.

Poland plans to offset the loss in trade by deals with Russia, Finland and Czechoslovakia. It was officially announced that a new 13-million-dollar trade agreement has been signed by Finnish and Polish representatives in Moscow providing for Finland to ship copper, paper, zinc contentrates and other commodities in exchange for increased deliveries of Polish coal.

Coupled with the economic blows at Yugoslavia was another blast from Greek Communist leaders. A communique by the Greek guerilla radio charged that Yugoslav fifth columnists were boring into the rebel ranks and had persuaded "a certain number of guerillas" to desert.

Austria Freed From Allied Reparations

London, July 7 (AP).—The Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers formally exempted Austria today from having to pay war reparations to the Allies.

The West approved a Soviet clause which allows Yugoslavia to keep all Austrian properties, rights and interests in Yugoslav territory—value of which has been set at about 15 million dollars.

The deputies are left with a total of 14 unagreed clauses in the treaty. Several are near settlement. The whole treaty is to be ready—if possible—by September 1.

Russia is turning over all war booty and German assets she holds—with the exception of certain oil and shipping rights—to Austria in return for a lump sum settlement of 150 million dollars. The deputies are now arguing about the way in which Austria should pay this sum.

Mindszenty Appeal Ruling Due Saturday

Budapest, July 7 (AP).—A decision is scheduled Saturday on Josef Cardinal Mindszenty's appeal from a life sentence for treason.

Hungary's five-judge Court of Appeals has the power to let People's Court sentences stand, reduce them or increase them.

The court took up the case of the Roman Catholic primate and his codefendants quietly last night, then adjourned until Saturday. The press was not notified and Hungarian newspapers this morning did not mention the hearing.

The Appeal Court does not see defendants in person. The judges study the trial records, including transcripts of testimony, and hear attorneys' arguments.

Chief Prosecutor Jozsef Brobely contended the sentence passed by the original court was too light. Defense counsel urged alleviation.

Berlin Supply Lines Normal

Berlin, July 7 (AP).—Berlin's supply lines were restored to normal today for the first time in 14 months of blockade and labor strife, Allied authorities disclosed.

The railway system has overcome the effects of the five-week west Berlin strike which nullified the lifting of the Soviet blockade.

Seventeen loaded freight trains came into western Berlin yesterday and 11 departed. This was the pre-blockade average.

The rail system has been pumping a daily average of 13,000 tons of supplies into the western sectors ever since last weekend.

Trucks delivered a total of 27,690 tons from west Germany to west Berlin last week and canal barges brought another 23,369 tons.

Foes Launch Fight on Pact surprise speech nor scheduled House hearings will affect the outcome very much.

"I doubt there will be more than 8 to 10 votes against the treaty," Wherry said.

Democratic leaders stuck by their earlier estimate of only six to eight opposition votes.

Sandwiched in between yesterday's opposition speeches was a plea by Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) for ratification. Wiley said the treaty would consummate the United Nation's goal of ultimate world peace.

"Budgetary Ambush"

Flanders, however, said he feared the treaty would weaken the U. N. and play into Russian hands by forcing us into deficit spending to finance a continuing arms program.

"The point I am making," Flanders said, "is simply that we must not allow ourselves to be drawn into this budgetary ambush which Josef Stalin and his associates have set for our destruction."

Instead of a "competitive" armament program, which he insisted the Atlantic Pact would result in, Flanders said the Administration "must right-about-face and fight the enemy of mankind on his own chosen battlefield of the mind and spirit of man."

He said intelligently conducted "psychological" warfare could reach the people behind the Iron Curtain and win the Cold War for a tenth of what we are spending on armaments.

Flanders said he would support the treaty only if he receives legislative and administrative assurances the pact will operate "as the pilot plant for the United Nations as we had expected it to be."

"Let its common defense be organized along the lines of the United Nations police force," he said, "and let our contribution be to such a common force rather than to the strengthening of the individual armies of the individual signatories. Let us provide for a truly common defense."

Flanders said he will introduce a resolution in the Senate today to carry out this idea. In effect, it would form an alliance of all nations who would submit to an international police force and international control of the atom bomb.

Several Republican supporters of the pact, including Senators Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.) sought to persuade Flanders that the pact as now proposed provides the "psychological" weapon he seeks. Flanders insisted, however, that its effect on Russia would be nil.

Watkins, Jenner Make Points

Potential foes of the program also hopped in with questions. Senator Watkins argued that the pact proposed to stop Russia with arms, not psychology, and Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) contended Britain will force us to supply her with arms by cutting down on her own defense spending.

Under questioning by Wherry, Flanders said he considered the pact a moral obligation to supply arms to Europe.

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) told Flanders that putting the pact before the arms program was like "putting the buggy before the horse. It's not going to get us very far until we hitch it up."

Mundt Backs Flanders

Mundt strongly indorsed Flanders' idea of expanding the 12-nation pact into a world-wide alliance for peace.

In the second major opposition speech, Donnell, like Flanders, contended the pact obligates the United States to supply arms to Europe and asked:

"Isn't it likely Russia will say, 'We'd better prepare for war.'"

Donnell argued that the pact has no machinery for combatting Russia's type of "indirect aggression," and said Administration arguments were based entirely on "speculation."

1¼ Millions Asked For Archives

Senator Herbert O'Connor (D., Md.) yesterday introduced a bill calling for the construction of a $5,125,000 national archives building in which to store Government records. The measure was referred to the Senate Public Works Committee.

Another local measure, introduced yesterday by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) would authorize the Commissioners to contract for the removal of sludge, now deposited at Lorton (Va.) Reformatory.

The Gallup Poll

Survey Shows 67% Favor Atlantic Pact

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 7.—The contrast between public opinion on foreign policy in this summer of 1949 and the fateful summer of 1939 which led to World War II is so striking as to make one wonder whether we're even living in the same country.

Ten years ago American opinion was deeply split on the issue of isolationism. Powerful voices called for a hands-off policy toward Europe—for an attitude of live-and-let-live. Hitler was getting ready to strike at Poland, an invasion which precipitated the general war, but the American neutrality act was still on the statute books and a large body of opinion wanted that law kept and strictly enforced so that we would take no part in Europe's affairs.

Today the United States is deeply immersed in Europe's affairs via the Marshall Plan and getting ready to become even more involved, via the Atlantic Pact—all with the overwhelming support of public opinion.

The latest test of sentiment on the Atlantic Pact shows a ratio of 4-to-1 in favor of Senate ratification of the pact.

The question put to voters follows:

"The United States and various North Atlantic countries, such as Canada, England, France, Norway and Holland, have signed a mutual defense pact—that is, each country has agreed to come to the defense of any of the other countries if it is attacked. Do you think the United States Senate should or should not ratify (approve) the North Atlantic Security Pact?"

A poll on this question was conducted in May and the trend of sentiment follows:

	Today	May, 1949
Should	67%	67%
Should not	15	12
No opinion	18	21

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, on returning from Paris, asked the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to speed ratification of the Atlantic Pact and consideration of the bill to provide money for arms to Europe. Debate on the bill began this week in the Senate.

Majorities in every section of the country were found in the poll to favor ratification.

Electronic Brain May Be Able At Least to Translate Sonnet

Los Angeles, July 7 (AP).—Maybe the electronic brain can't write a sonnet, but it can translate one.

This is Dr. Harry D. Huskey's reply to a British scholar, hot off the machine's cathode tube.

Huskey is supervising 30 other mathematicians and technicians who are building a big mechanical brain for the United States Bureau of Standards. Their work, proceeding night and day, is centered at the University of California in Los Angeles.

The device, comprising cathode tubes, magnetic recording tape and other gadgets, may be expected to compute salaries, forecast weather, solve social and economic problems, make hitherto impossible checks on scientific theories and maybe even replace a minor human executive, Huskey said recently.

These predictions got a reaction in the British press. Prof. Geoffrey Jefferson at Manchester University was quoted: "No mechanical brain can ever write a sonnet."

Well, Huskey now says the machine can function at least partially as a poet too. Since it can translate foreign languages, it can provide a literal translation of a sonnet, he said. This doesn't mean the translated verse will scan or rhyme.

"However, some steps in that direction are not inconceivable theoretically," he said.

Huskey said the UCLA brain will have a high-speed memory which can store 500 to 1000 words or numbers at a time, and can perform 16,000 additions and 4000 multiplications per second.

The machine also will have a low-speed memory capable of storing millions of words—if there were that many. The brain will retain the 60,000 or more words in Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, and also supply three equivalents for each English word.

Germans Cut Prices of New Car Models

Hamburg, July 7 (AP).—The Volkswagen (People's car) factory at Wolfsburg today announced production of new models.

The basic form of the tiny rear-engined car remains the same, but plant officials said there were a number of refinements like improved finish, padding to reduce vibration, better and more comfortable upholstery and tougher bumpers.

In addition to the salon, two new types are to be mass produced next month. They are a convertible two-seater roadster and a four-seater convertible.

Prices for the export model will go down from 5625 d-marks ($1687.50) to 5450 d-marks ($1635).

The "standard" inland model also will be reduced in price from 5300 d-marks ($1590) to 4800 d-marks ($1440).

The 1949 production of People's cars is expected to reach the 40,000 target. Officials said that by 1950 they hope to put out 60,000 a year.

AFL League Lists 20 Senators for Backing in 1950

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—The AFL's League for Political Education plans to support at least 17 Democrats and three Republicans in the 1950 senatorial elections.

The league's national director, Joseph D. Keenan, said in an interview the AFL will campaign vigorously to "elect our friends and defeat our enemies."

Keenan said those Senators his group plans to support are:

Democrats — Downey (Calif.), Graham (N. C.), Hayden (Ariz.), Hill (Ala.), Johnson (S. C.), Long (La.), Lucas (Ill.), McCarran (Nev.), McMahon (Conn.), Magnuson (Wash.), Myers (Pa.), Pepper (Fla.), Taylor (Idaho), Thomas (Okla.), Thomas (Utah), Tydings (Md.), and Withers (Ky.).

Republicans—Aiken (Vt.), Morse (Oreg.), and Tobey (N. H.).

He said the league expects to collect one million dollars through contributions of $1 each from members for next year's campaign.

Contributions in 1948 totaled $400,000 at the $1 rate, and a 10-cent-a-month assessment now is in effect.

Hot Sun Starts Hatching Eggs Discarded as Unfit

Newark, Ohio, July 7 (U.P.)—Hundreds of eggs discarded at the Newark City garbage dump as unfit for use by a hatchery started hatching under the sizzling sun.

Many youngsters raced down to the dump to get a free chick for a pet, but most of the newly hatched died a short time after they popped out of their shells because of lack of food.

Dailies Differ On Home Rule

gress and the Maryland Legislature, without amending the Constitution.

Throughout the hearing, Chairman Harris, an opponent of the home-rule plan to date, emphasized his interest and support for national representation for the District. He and other witnesses also pointed out that this would require amendment of the Constitution. A move of that kind is outside the jurisdiction of the District Committee.

Representative Auchincloss (R., N. J.), leading House sponsor of home rule for Washington, asked McKelway if his testimony meant he did not favor home rule without national representation.

"I did not make that condition," said McKelway. "National representation is not included in the present bill. This bill puts the issue of home rule up to the people to decide. I cannot oppose such legislation. Personally I'm not enthusiastic about it because I do not believe it would bring about better municipal government. I think it's more or less worthless because it would not include representation in Congress."

Graham said he supported the Senate-approved home-rule bill as one that would lead to better municipal government, and would relieve Congress of burdens that interfere with its over-all national responsibility.

Urges Action Now

He urged action on the bill at this session so that the transition to home rule would take place under the eyes of the Congress that created the new setup.

"It has been said that we have the best municipal government in the world," Graham observed. "From that, I should have to dissent. If true, it would have terrible philosophical implications."

"It's true we do not have the worst city. Other cities have had juicier scandals, more flamboyant graft and corruption."

But, Graham added, the Washington rate of certain types of crimes is the highest in the United States; Washington has "a flourishing horse and bookie operation," and "we lack the drive by the people toward the solution of their own problems that is typical of our finer cities."

He said he had seen in Pittsburgh and Richmond outstanding examples of the way citizens had exercised local responsibility in the solution of major local problems. In contrast, he said, efforts to deal with similar problems in a similar way in Washington meet with "lethargy, resistance, and the feeling of no local responsibility."

Representative Auchincloss, complimenting Graham for "a very clear exposition of why home rule is necessary," asked whether home-rule legislation should deal with segregation in the light of recent experience with Washington swimming pools.

"I think the worst thing that could happen to the segregation issue," Graham replied, "would be to take it out of the hands of the decent, common-sense electorate and make it a political football at the national level."

Blames Fracas on Wallaceites

He said the proper way to handle the problem was to leave it to the community. In Pittsburgh, he said, the problem is being solved by the common-sense efforts of an interracial committee. If allowed to handle it the same way here, he said, "I think we'd do a job you'll be proud of."

At another point, he commented that in the swimming pool disturbances "the Wallaceites wanted an incident, they wanted it for propaganda to export. Had we had local responsibility, working through an interracial committee, that incident would not have erupted by surprise. We wouldn't have handed the Wallaceites an opportunity to capitalize on the incident for propaganda consumption overseas."

Harris asked whether home rule would be used to bring about non-segregation. Graham said that Washington is a city whose mores are predominantly Southern, and "I should be surprised if this city, given home rule, would not meet the problem about the same way as Richmond, or Louisville, or Knoxville. I'd wager that a common sense solution would be reached along the lines followed in those cities."

Harris asked Waldrop what he thought of the idea, suggested recently by District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) for turning all but the Federal holdings in the District back to Maryland. "That's a pretty good idea," said Waldrop. "I'm not against it. It might be the way out. After all, a good portion of the original District was receded to Virginia because the Virginians had a little more backbone and insisted upon getting back into the American political establishment."

Sharpe, Lusk and McKee renewed expressions of opposition to home rule they presented in hearings last year.

"We believe," said Sharpe "that all the advancement, all the beautifications, all the finer realities of living in Washington have been due primarily to the Federal Government. The home-rule bill as it is written is full of inequities. There is nothing in the present Government that is wrong. We'll continue to advance under the commission form of government with the appointment of proper men. I firmly believe that the day the Federal Government relinquishes control of the Federal city it will decline, and decline badly."

Lusk said no supporters of home rule had proved, they had only assumed, that home rule would produce a better or more economical city government. He said other cities had far more severe problems. "Baltimore still has gas lights and cobblestone streets; Philadelphia had to mortgage the municipal gas works; there's no need to mention Jersey City."

McKee said the District Legion still firmly opposes the home rule bill. Instead of home rule, he urged that action be started to provide statehood for the District.

Rimless Glasses Blamed for Cancer

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Four Philadelphia dermatologists have put the finger on rimless eyeglasses as the probable cause of some face cancers, the American Medical Society reported last night.

The four physicians, all skin specialists of Jefferson Medical College's department of dermatology, placed the blame on the "burning glass" effect of such spectacles, spot-focusing sunlight on the face below the lens.

They recommended a ready remedy, the application of small spots of rim black, a lacquer used by the optical trade, to be placed on the "upper or lower edges of the lenses. Such spots, they noted, would be scarcely noticeable and would break up the route of the light beam.

Twelve cases in which skin conditions near the eyes were believed to have been caused by heat or chemical rays conducted by spectacle lenses were reported by the investigators, Drs. Edward F. Corson, George M. Knoll, Herbert A. Luscombe and Henry B. Decker, the AMA pointed out in a news release.

In nine patients, the condition was diagnosed as cancer; in one, as keratoses, premalignant growths caused by radiation, and the remaining two patients were believed to have chronic actinic dermatitis, a skin disturbance caused by light rays.

"In our investigations," they said in their original report in the April issue of Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, "it was found that certain types of spectacle frames were especially responsible for transmission of light and its focusing on the skin below the lower edge of the lens. These were above all the rimless spectacles with lenses of round or elliptic (oval) outline."

Only in one case reviewed was it noted that the patient wore metal-rimmed glasses, and in her case it was specified that the rims were narrow bands "which did not entirely obscure the edge of the lens."

All 12 patients were white. The specialists reported they have not observed similar conditions in Negroes.

Summing up their findings, they observed:

"It is believed that glasses without rims are largely responsible for these effects, but even this style of spectacles can be worn safely without structural change if rim black is carefully applied to the upper and lower edges of the lenses."

Wins Proxy Battle

Fairchild Gets Control of Aircraft Firm

By Rene J. Cappon

Hagerstown, Md., July 7 (AP).—Sherman Fairchild and his slate of directors today gained control of the aircraft company he founded as the present management conceded defeat in the stockholders' election.

J. Carlton Ward, jr., chairman of the board of Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp. which now has been ousted, had left for Washington before the decision came shortly after 9:30 p. m. at a reconvened meeting of shareholders.

It was Richard Boutelle, nominee for president of the company on Fairchild's slate, who took over direction at the reconvened meeting when L. B. Richardson, president on the management slate, announced his group's defeat.

Richardson said that a large portion of the proxies submitted at the climax of the long and bitter struggle had been counted and that it was clear that the Fairchild directors had been elected.

Ward issued a statement before leaving saying that "it is our sincere hope that Fairchild's new slate of directors elected today will, in the national interest, be successful in carrying forward the many major projects in research and production that have been entrusted to the corporation by the military services.

Boutelle, as he took charge of the meetings amid applause from stockholders and Fairchild supporters, said there would be no changes at this time of the personnel of the corporation's seven divisions.

While final tabulation will be completed at a later date, the vote was approximately 900,000 to 500,000 when management threw in the towel.

Fairchild's row with management started with his criticism of a pension contract for Ward several months ago. He conducted a novel postcard poll of shareholders to ascertain their views, and was flooded with replies discussing this and various other issues.

The pension contract which had already been approved by the board of directors, some of whom Fairchild termed "subservient to Ward," was later withdrawn at the board chairman's own request.

Meantime, a 10-member stockholders' committee, including Fairchild, was formed. It called for more economy, higher dividends and improved management-stockholder relations, as well as the ousting of the Ward group.

Montgomery Will Survey 'Lost' Lands

Montgomery soon will launch a three-year survey to find 'lost" property that should be—but is not—on county tax rolls.

The survey, to be made from aerial photographs and Army maps, will cost about $40,000, Wilton T. Allen, County Supervisor of Assessments, said. It is expected to "more than pay for itself" by yielding additional tax revenue, Allen stated.

The study should reveal that many pieces of property actually in Montgomery County are being listed as in Prince Georges, Frederick, Howard, and possibly Carroll counties, he said.

Allen pointed out that the assessment department has had to rely on outdated maps of suburban areas, while there have been no maps available for many rural areas. He said the survey maps will be prepared by three draftsmen under direction of Thomas Brown, assessment department engineer.

Frederick Water Supply Hit by Leak

Frederick, Md., July 7 (AP).—Working crews were searching Frederick's chief water main today for a leak which has caused a serious drop in pressure at the city plant.

The 18-inch Linganore water main burst late last night. Since then, the pressure in the city has been gradually decreasing from the normal 60 pounds to 22 pounds by this afternoon.

All but the higher areas still have water, however, according to Water Superintendent William J. Davis. He said some trouble also has been reported from the upper floors of public and business buildings.

The Linganore line ordinarily supplies the city with about two million of the 3,335,000 gallons of water it consumes daily.

Barge to Take 2 Scenic Tours Over Weekend

The Canal Clipper, picturesque mule-drawn barge that plies the Chesapeake and Ohio canal on scenic tours from Georgetown to Brookmont, Md., will be back in service at 2 p.m. Saturday, the National Park Service announced yesterday.

The barge was grounded last week after striking a submerged log near Chain Bridge. The barge leaves Lock 3 on 30th st. nw., one block south of M street Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. and returns from Brookmont at 4 p.m.

Other events scheduled by the Park Service for the weekend include an all-day outing in Catoctin Park in Maryland's Blue Ridge Mountains that begins at 8:30 a. m. Saturday at 1416 F st. nw., and a two-hour mushroom walk through Rock Creek Park that leaves 16th st. and Missouri ave. nw., at 3 p. m. Saturday.

On Sunday, Historian T. Sutton Jett will conduct a tour of Fort Stevens and Battleground Cemetery from 2:30 to 4 p. m.

National Park Service officials also announced that the Great Falls (Md.) Wayside Exhibit and Nature Trail at the Old Great Falls Tavern will be open Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon to 6 p. m. and the museum at Fort Washington, Md., will be open Saturday and Sunday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THEY MADE IT THIS TIME—Danny Kaye, comedian, kisses the propeller of a special plane at LaGuardia Field, N. Y., last night and holds hands with Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont (left) and Louise Brough, tennis stars. The trio arrived safely from England in a second plane after narrowly missing a possible ditching in the Atlantic when they and 53 others on a trans-atlantic airliner were forced back to Shannon, Ireland, after one of the engines caught fire rafts for a possible "ditch" landing.

Louise Brough, American tennis star who last week won the British women's singles championship, and her colleague Margaret Osborne duPont, also were aboard the plane.

Pilot H. G. Gulbransen of Lake Prospect, N. Y., said the trouble started at 3 a. m., when the plane was some 600 miles west of Ireland. The flight engineer reported a drop in oil pressure in the outer engine on the right wing.

The cause of the trouble was not immediately determined.

After trying unsuccessfully to feather the propeller on the laboring engine, Gulbransen turned back to Shannon as sparks from the propeller hub ignited magnesium parts of the engine.

Kaye and the other passengers were asleep in their berths.

"I woke up and heard the engine sounding queer," Kaye said. "Then the steward came along the aisle and told us we better dress.

"We were told we might come down in the ocean, and while I can swim, 800 miles is out of my range," the actor added. "I was never in such a flap in my life."

Kaye denied a report he cracked jokes to cheer up his fellow passengers.

"What's the use of lying? I was scared like everybody else," he said. "I was in no mood for cracking jokes. I was plenty scared."

Jack Winocour, editor of the Jerusalem newspaper, Palestine Post, said: "The passengers and crew remained calm. We donned lifebelts and got ready to launch rafts. The stewardess went up and down, reassuring the passengers. Two children in arms slept peacefully."

The propeller fell off and the engine fire burned itself out in about 45 minutes.

During the fire, the plane dropped from 19,000 feet altitude to 6000 feet. McNutt said the loss of altitude was "absolutely terrifying."

Two B-24 bombers of the Royal Air Force's air-sea rescue service flew to meet the crippled plane, but Gulbransen brought it in to a safe, unaided landing at 6:40 a. m.

Israel Relaxes Ban On Refugee Arabs

Tel Aviv, Israel, July 7 (U.P.).—The Israel foreign ministry today announced the relaxation of restrictions on the return of Arab refugees to Israel.

Some 12,000 members of "broken" Arab families—close relatives of Arabs who remained in Israel—were expected to become eligible to rejoin their families here.

However, applications will be accepted only from such relatives now residing in the kingdom of Jordan, Lebanon and Egypt—the only Arab countries which have signed armistice agreements with Israel. Arab refugees in Syria and Iraq will continue to be excluded, the announcement said.

Two Sought In Holdup at Western Union

Police were still searching last night for two armed bandits that took $585 at gunpoint from a 20-year-old Western Union Telegraph Co. clerk early yesterday.

Miss Louise Rocheck, of Arlington Farms, was on duty in the company office at 1317 New York ave. nw. when two men, one of whom had written a message at a customer desk, presented it to her. It said:

"This is a holdup. Don't move or say a word. Just lay the money on the counter."

She did, a total of $585. As the two walked out, stopping to retrieve a one dollar bill one dropped, she fainted. This was the first that three men employes in the office knew of the robbery. The holdup occurred about 2:30 a. m.

Miss Rocheck said one of the "customers' " pointed a nickel-plated revolver, swathed in a handkerchief, at her to enforce the demand for prompt service.

Both men were described as between 20 and 30, wearing pompadour hair, and sport shirts. They walked west on New York ave.

FBI Enters 'Border War'

Acree stepped aboard Nelson's 26-foot skipjack boat with a drawn rifle. No struggle took place, they say, before Nelson fell to the floor of his boat shot fatally in the right rear hip. Eyewitnesses place the exact location of the shooting at 200 yards inside the Maryland border.

Virginia Commonwealth's Attorney E. Almer Ames, however, places the location of the shooting at 2 or 3 miles inside the Virginia border. This conflict caused Ames to issue a Virginia murder warrant against Acree on Wednesday, an hour before Maryland county authorities arrived in Accomac with the Maryland warrant.

The question of the alleged struggle and resistance of arrest by Nelson became increasingly important yesterday morning when Nelson's trousers were flown to the FBI here, on orders of Duer.

Somerset County deputy coroner, Dr. William Coulbourne, reiterated yesterday that he saw no powder marks on Nelson's body when he performed the autopsy.

Crisfield Police Chief Earl Rich also repeated his earlier statement he had seen no powder marks on Nelson's trousers.

Two Virginia State policemen arrived in Crisfield yesterday to conduct a separate investigation of the shooting a few hours before Nelson's funeral. They were Lieut. Robert King and Special Investigator W. L. Koffman. Later the officers and Ames asked to see and were shown Nelson's boat.

Shooting Scene Inspected

After conferring with Duer, the Virginia officials left with Maryland State troopers to inspect the scene of the shooting. Duer said Maryland officials would make available all their information, but pointed out that Virginia was conducting a separate investigation.

Duer also said he planned to initiate extradition proceedings against both Acree and the pilot of the State Fisheries Commission plane, George Colonna, jr., 20.

Colonna is charged in a Maryland warrant with being an accessory after the fact in the slaying of Nelson. Since Virginia has issued no warrant against him, Somerset County Sheriff Woodland Jackson went personally to Weirwood yesterday morning to arrest Colonna.

But Northampton (Va.) County Commonwealth's Attorney L. H. Mears gave Jackson the cold shoulder. He refused to issue a Virginia warrant charging Colonna with being an accessory after the fact. Virginia thus has refused to charge Colonna and refused to surrender him to the State which has.

Turner refused to serve the warrant on Acree, saying he could not possibly find him, although newsmen had seen him less than an hour before. Turner neved did find Acree.

Acree is a native of Groveland, Fla., a graduate of public schools there and in Orlando. He enlisted in the Navy shortly after the start of the war and served with the Atlantic fleet on cruisers, troopships and repair ships on anti-submarine and convoy duty, he told his lawyer, B. Drummond Ayres of Accomac.

Acree was honorably discharged from the Navy in December, 1945, as radioman first class, Ayres said, while he was taking flight training. Shortly after his discharge Acree received a commercial pilot's license.

Ayres said Acree was deputized by an unknown oyster policeman on the day of the shooting, but had been on several trips for the State Fisheries Commission before the Nelson shooting.

Weirwood citizens spoke highly of Acree. They called him "as nice a guy as you'd want to meet"; "quiet, minds his own business" and "a fine boy."

Acree's bond was paid by Norman Heath, Weirwood property owner and farmer, to Accomack County Bond Commissioner Benjamin Gunter.

The time table of the Acree and Colonna cases was clouded last night. Accomac County authorities said Acree would appear July 15 at a preliminary hearing at which attempt would be made to fix the exact location of the shooting. If the crime is found to have been committed in Virginia, the cases would be presented to the Accomac County grand jury here.

Both men have said they would fight extradition proceedings—apparently well aware of the reputation of Eastern Shore watermen as a notoriously independent lot with a minimum of respect for legal authority.

It is no secret that during the war, gasoline, meat and other rationed products were plentiful in the area without coupons. Law enforcement authorities were asked to leave or be forcibly ejected. Smith Islanders boast they ran two FBI investigators off their island at gunpoint early this year.

In the early thirties two lynchings occurred in Salisbury and Princess Anne and a man was burned to death by an angry crowd in Salisbury. In Virginia this morning, rumor had it Crisfield fishermen were "coming down after Acree."

One Crisfield resident described Eastern Shore philosophy this way: "We're O. K. if you leave us alone. You try to push us and we're going to tell you to get out of here and fast. We mind our business and we expect strangers to keep their noses out of it."

Everyone is a stranger, he said, unless he has lived on the Eastern Shore for a long time.

67 and Deaf, Woman Puts End to Life

A 67-year-old woman who left a note saying she "couldn't stand" encroaching deafness, was found dead in bed early yesterday at her home, 159 Forrester st. sw.

She was Mrs. Clara Bailey, found by her daughter, Mrs. Helen Klimek.

Near the body police found a vial with six remaining sleeping pills. In a wastepaper basket, was the note in which Mrs. Bailey said she "couldn't stand it any longer."

Mrs. Klimek told police her mother had been distressed about growing deaf.

The daughter said when she returned home about 2 a. m. her mother greeted her in the hallway with the remark: "Goodbye, I'll be gone in the morning."

Mrs. Klimek said at the time she thought her mother meant she would leave the house early.

About a half an hour later Mrs. Klimek said she found her mother unconscious in bed. Mrs. Bailey was pronounced dead by a doctor summoned by police.

Delinquency In Germany Like America's

The juvenile delinquency problems in defeated Germany and in postwar America are "basically the same," two Western German child welfare specialists said yesterday.

Miss Helene Haussner and Dr. Elsa Freese visited Arlington yesterday to find out how that county takes care of its "big problem children."

They have completed two-thirds of a three-month tour of the United States, sponsored by our Government, and touching such cities as Richmond, Va., Kansas City, Mo., Topeka, Kans., Oregon, Wisc.

Said Dr. Frese: "For the last few years, Germany has been overburdened with the material needs of her children. We have neglected the techniques of (psychiatric) treatment."

That, both women explained, was why they included yesterday's visit to Arlington's new mental hygiene clinic in their United States tour.

They found delinquency problems in both countries similar—problem children "created by broken homes, war divorces, war deaths."

But German's postwar problem is the more serious, the welfare workers felt. "Our children from 14 to 18 years never have had normal living conditions," Dr. Frese said.

Rise in Polio Rate Now Leveling Off

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A leveling off in the Nation's rising rate of infantile paralysis cases was reported here yesterday, offering a bit of good news to parents and health authorities.

The slowdown was noted in figures released by Public Health Service's Office of Vital Statistics.

They showed 479 new cases of polio in the Nation for the week ending last Saturday. Though this is an increase of 70 over the preceding week, it contrasts favorably to that week's increase of 131.

As cautious in optimism yesterday as they were in pessimism last week, the record-keepers released the statistics with no more comment than the statistically obvious warning that "increased incidence in poliomyelitis is to be expected during the next few weeks."

Nationally, the polio toll has risen sharply in July every year for which the statistics are available.

Yesterday's figures showed that 3197 new cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in the Nation this year to July 2. This compares to 2368 during the same period last year and to a five-year median of 1271 cases.

On Wednesday, basing his concern on totals to the week ending June 25, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said 1949 may be the worst in the Nation's history.

"It all depends on how the increases in cases goes," he said then.

Yesterday's report noted that the only States from which current reports "suggest localized epidemics" are Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Ten States, it was noted, reported increases of five or more new cases over the previous week.

These were listed as Arkansas, 42 to 59; Kansas, 2 to 13; Louisiana, 4 to 15; Minnesota, 16 to 25; Ohio, 0 to 6; Illinois, 3 to 11; Massachusetts, 4 to 10; New York, 7 to 12; Indiana, 2 to 7, and Texas, 113 to 118.

The District of Columbia showed one new case last week, to make a total of four for this year. Maryland, with 14 cases recorded to June 25, had no new ones last week.

Virginia reported four new polio cases for the week compared to two for the same week last year. The total now is 17 cases for the year. For the same period last year, Virginia had 21 cases.

One of last week's new cases in Virginia was reported from Fairfax County.

Chart Lists Polio by States

State by State records of polio cases reported this year and for the comparable period of last year, as compiled by the National Office of Vital Statistics, U. S. Public Health Service. (Statisticians point out that since December, 1948, polio cases in epidemic States, notably Texas, California and North Carolinia, piled up on the health authorities and were carried over into early January figures of 1949.)

Queen Mother Absent From Garden Party

London, July 7 (U.P.).—King George VI entertained 6000 of his subjects and their friends today at a traditional garden party in the "back yard" of Buckingham Palace.

Queen Mother Mary was absent, for the first time in years. The 82-year-old dowager queen reluctantly stayed home on the advice of her doctors, who said she had been too active of late, especially during the recent heat wave.

Arab Leaders Going To Britain for Talks

London, July 7 (AP).—A Foreign Office spokesman announced today that top leaders of three Arab nations will visit Britain in the next few weeks.

Simultaneously, all of Britain's ambassadors to the countries of the Middle West will be in London for vital talks on British policy in that seething region.

The informant said these Arab leaders are coming to Britain: King Abdullah and Premier Huda Pasha El Tewfik of Trans-Jordan; Emir Abdul Ilah, regent of Iraq, and Emir El Sayed Idris El Senussi of Cyrenaica.

ADD to your list of likely places to go these summer evenings:

For an outdoor touch in the city, there is the Shoreham Terrace, in a natural setting of lawns, trees, and pool with fountain. Barnee, one of our unique personalities, will enchant you. The Barnee-Lowe orchestra plays for dancing with a complete floor show.

The Roger Smith Roof, at 18th and Pennsylvania, is reasonable, cool, and metropolitan. The Washington Hotel's roof serves only food and drinks, both of which are excellent.

Good floor shows are scarce; the Chinese-owned Lotus and Casino Royale are two standbys that are easy on the pocketbook. Merry Land and Kavakos also have floor shows, and out near the Peace Monument in Bladensburg, the Cross Roads boasts a good singing team.

You can depend upon some of the hotels for harmonious surroundings and good music. The Statler's gift to the wanderer is Evalyn Tyner and her trio, and that's quite a gift. Tyner is back after playing an engagement at the Capitol Theater in New York.

Across the street the Carlton Hotel has the Congo Room which will grow on you; Basil Fomeen and his orchestra play for dancing and the food's excellent. The Mayflower is faultless in decor, with smooth, danceable music.

A happy combination of superior food and unique entertainment can be found at Michel's, at 1020 Vermont ave. Michel, a violin virtuoso, leads a small group of classically trained musicians.

Just for eating, Washington's outstanding places include Olmsted's, the Water Gate (where there's Pennsylvania Dutch food) and La Salle du Bois where French food prevails.

Then there's Cannon's Steak House, Hogates for sea food, and the New England Raw Bar at 23 Municipal Fish Market.

In the midst of the movie district, the Neptune Room offers an above-average trio and pianist, good food and drinks, at surprisingly low prices.

A FRENCHMAN and a bicycle make up a pretty smooth combination at the Lotus these nights.

A dapper, sparkling little man, Jean Laflotte skillfully turns prosaic devices into something special. First on a bicycle, and then on a unicycle, he executes some intricate figures.

Eileen and Carver, dance team on the same program, fly through the air in lifts and twirls that make their dance routine largely air borne.

Basing-Point Pricing Bill Gets House Approval

The House passed a basing-point pricing bill yesterday after approving amendments intended to protect small business.

Passage was by voice vote.

The bill now goes back to the Senate for consideration of House changes. The Senate has passed a similar bill, differing in details.

The purpose of the legislation is to clarify the position of business as a result of recent Supreme Court rulings that systematic freight absorption in delivered prices violates the anti-trust laws.

The legislation says that manufacturers may quote identical delivered prices from a base pricing point to different delivery points if there is no collusion to fix prices and destroy competition. It also permits manufacturers to pay the shipping costs in meeting competition.

Senate Chamber

The greatest deliberative body in the world is now meeting in the chamber where it gained, and perhaps, indeed, earned, that title. It is a chamber crowded now by the emissaries of no less than 48 States. There is scarcely room for them to be seated comfortably. They have had to give up the individual desks which are an almost indispensable prerogative of senatorial office. They have even had to forgo some of the traditions of senatorial discourtesy — the casual conversation among members while a colleague held the floor, presumably for the benefit of the Congressional Record. The Vice President, inaugurating the business of the Senate in this chamber on Tuesday, felt obliged to suggest that "conversation be kept to a minimum," because, as he put it, "the acoustics of this chamber are very excellent. From the standpoint of the chair they are, because the chair can hear even a whisper coming from any point in the chamber."

When the Senate of the United States first convened in these quarters, in 1800, to hear a message from President John Adams its membership numbered only 32. By the time it relinquished the room to the Supreme Court in 1860, the roster had grown to 66. Many of the basic issues which shaped the growth of the Union were debated in that span of years—including the tragic cleavage that led to the War Between the States. The Supreme Court held sway in this historic room from 1860 until its own magnificent building was completed in 1935—a period in which it has been said, not without some justification, that the country lived under government by judiciary.

In 1823, President James Monroe sent to the Senate deliberating in this room a message on the State of the Union which enunciated the doctrine now known by his name—a doctrine which declared that the United States was prepared, if necessary, to expend its blood and treasure to prevent European imperialist expansion in the Western Hemisphere. That candid expression of national policy has stood for a century and a quarter as a bulwark to the independence of less powerful republics to the south. The North Atlantic Pact which the Senate is debating today on the same site is curiously analagous to the Monroe Doctrine. It, too, constitutes a candid declaration of what the United States deems its vital interests—a declaration designed to keep foreign governments from the fatal error of supposing that they can breach these interests with impunity. The Senate will do well to view this measure in the light of its own history.

Federal Illness

In its hearings on the National Health Insurance and Public Health bill, the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce is simultaneously considering a multitude of separate bills providing for Federal support for research, training, and public health activities pertaining to a whole list of separate diseases. The Administration bill mentions "poliomyelitis, diabetes, arthritis and rheumatism, multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy and epilepsy, or any other diseases." Other bills specifically provide for leprosy, blindness and eye diseases, among others. No fewer than 13 measures have been introduced on multiple sclerosis, the disease that killed Lou Gehrig, and in hearings before the committee mention has been made of the possibility of Federal attack upon the common cold.

The case for granting Federal funds for research into the causes and cures of any particular illness is almost unassailable. Blindness is a good example. While millions of dollars are regularly spent for aid to the 260,000 people who are already blind, very little in the way of organized research is being done, for lack of funds, to prevent the blindness that attacks 19,000 people every year. The case for Federal assistance is immeasurably strengthened by the precedent of Federal grants or commitments for cancer, heart ailments, venereal diseases, tuberculosis, dental diseases, and mental ailments.

The end result is that everyone is beginning to run to the Federal Government to get a share of the funds for his "favorite" disease. This newspaper is not opposed, of course, to the prevention of disease; nor do we think that Federal funds should be shut off from medical research aimed at such prevention. But even the best of subsidies has its limits, especially since there is no more guaranty of results in Government-financed research than in private research conducted in a garret. What is insured in these projects is, indeed, something that might frustrate results, and that is a piling up of bureaucracy upon bureaucracy in the medical field.

Restrictionism

It is all very well for Secretary Acheson to minimize the difficulty in which the British government finds itself. But the situation simply cannot be pooh-poohed as a temporary strain. Even the London Economist, arriving the same day as the Acheson comment, heads its leading article, "1952 Is Now," meaning that the time has come for Britain to seek solvency out of her own resources. This does not mean self-sufficiency. It means a recognition of economic interdependence in action: goods for goods, services for services, and no doles from America. The temporary measures announced by Sir Stafford Cripps to conserve hard money reserves are restrictionist. They provide for further strait-jacketing of the British people within the country and further insulation of the people in their foreign relations. This is another move toward self-sufficiency.

Think what this would mean in the case of the State of Maine. Dr. Taussig, one of the great economists of the last generation, used to say that Maine could grow bananas. But why, he used to ask, should she grow bananas when she can buy them with her potatoes, fish and climate, and so much cheaper and so much better? Britain is trying to be agriculturally self-sufficient. But the expense to the British people, demonstrated by the fat subsidies to British farmers, is out of all proportion to the advantage. Other Europeans are pursuing the same course of agricultural self-sufficiency. As the U. N. Economic Committee's report certified, they are all, likewise, straining to develop their own steel industries. At this rate they will soon have nothing to exchange but their own washing. This is the road to a poverty which the people simply cannot endure, but which, judging from the statements of sundry spokesmen, their present leaders expect the United States to subsidize.

This country has great need of Britain (and her neighbors) in the business of upholding the free world. It was for the purpose of putting Britain and other countries on their economic feet that the Marshall Plan was initiated—not, however, separately, but together, so as to restore them as a going concern. The basic idea was to restore a functioning Europe. Mr. Marshall did not use the plural. He did not say the British economy, the French economy, European economies. He talked about the "European world"; "Europe," "a working economy." What is happening is that the British are trying to build up an island economy, and the example has, perforce, to be copied in Europe. Whether it will influence Britain's partners in the sterling bloc by persuading them to curb their dollar purchases is, however doubtful. It looks, indeed, as if Cripps' restrictionism will lead to the disintegration of the sterling bloc, not the isolation of it under British leadership. That, to be sure, would be Britain's own funeral. The situation is of concern in this country because of the need to put the British and their neighbors in some partnership relation for the job of stabilizing a world doomed to constant travail.

This explains the openly expressed views six months ago of Messrs. Hoffman and Snyder in favor of the alignment of currencies in Europe on an interchangeable basis. They were acting according to the letter and the spirit of the Marshall Plan. Doubtless this "pushing and prodding," as Governor Dewey called it, may invite resentment. The plain fact of the matter, however, is that, as the Economist says, time, which is on the British side only if it is used, "has not been used to sufficient effect." Senator Fulbright raised this very question in the course of the debate on the second appropriation for ECA.

Surely the time has come to stop giving lip service to a continental economy, and work toward it. There is no salvation for Britain in behaving like a barricaded Maine. Sir Stafford Cripps' rigid prescriptions must have come like a shower of ice water to those earnest workers in Britain for Western integration and their millions of supporters. To be sure, the risks of embarking on this road are enormous. But there is hope in that direction, and none at all in the present direction of a closed economy. The story is told of a man who languished for five years in the Bastille. Suddenly he had an idea. He went to the door, found it open, and stepped out in the open air, a free man. Something like this, even if the open air proves squally, is needed in present-day Europe—if the continent is to recover health and strength, and if the Marshall Plan is to justify the statesmanship that inspired it.

Presidential Inaction

President Truman, in his news conference Thursday, indicated pretty clearly that he wants no part in the Hawaiian shipping strike, or blockade. Mr. Truman is understandably chary about appearing in the role of strikebreaker, though his intimation that he does not have the authority to intervene is decidedly at variance with the doctrine of "inherent powers" advanced by the Administration during the debate on repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. It is certainly possible to consider this strike as a breakdown in communications between States, which was one of the categories listed by Mr. Truman in which Federal intervention is possible.

Whether or not the Hawaiian tieup is a national emergency in all senses of the word, it assuredly is an emergency for the half million persons who have been isolated for 69 days. It is a peculiar kind of strike, in that the whole Hawaiian economy is dependent on shipping. Moreover, the Federal Government has a special responsibility for the welfare of the citizens of Hawaii who have no voting representation in Congress. The union and employers are still at odds, and it is apparent that some sort of governmental intervention will have to be employed to protect the public interest. It may be that the Territorial Governor, Ingram M. Stainback, has not exhausted all the powers at his command. But here again is a task for Mr. Truman, since Governor Stainback is a presidential appointee, and the President is in a position to suggest action to him. It is difficult to see how this negative attitude can be kept up much longer.

Union Shop

Some weeks ago the NLRB ruled that the union shop agreement incorporated in the UMW contract with the steel companies owning captive mines is illegal. That threatened to complicate the negotiation of new contracts not only with the captive mine-owners but the entire industry. However, the union subsequently filed a petition to set aside the order, and final decision will be delayed for some time. As a result the issue of the union shop will not be another complicating factor in current negotiations.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act it is an unfair labor practice to make membership in a labor union a condition of employment unless a majority of eligible employes vote in favor of a union shop proposal. Eventually, no doubt, this requirement will be dropped as an unnecessary protection against union coercion of workers. For up to June of this year, over 32,000 elections had been held, and more than 31,000 had recorded a majority for the union shop. Moreover, in some industries, notably the building trades, the practical difficulties of conducting elections have been formidable. Consequently it is safe to bet that when Congress gets around to passing new labor legislation, the union shop election requirement will be dropped. It was, in fact, omitted from the Taft-sponsored bill recently passed by the Senate.

Insofar as the UMW is concerned, there is no question that its members want the union shop. But they are disqualified from use of the NLRB's services to hold an election, because Mr. Lewis and other UMW officials have refused to sign the non-Communist oath. Since it's a near certainty that the oath requirement will not be dropped, Mr. Lewis may yet encounter difficulties in bargaining negotiations, even if the union shop election requirement is eventually discarded. So far as the miners are concerned, he may be able to dispense with the services of the board. But his catch-all District 50 unions exist on sufferance. They will be severely handicapped if they cannot invoke the machinery of the board and appear on ballots when workers have to choose between rival unions seeking to represent them.

In any case the Taft-Hartley Act is still the law of the land, and it is the duty of the regulatory agency administering it to enforce its provisions. Open defiance of legal restraints has been tolerated much too long. It encourages lawless conduct and generates contempt for law-enforcement agencies. We hope, therefore, that the NLRB ruling will be sustained and that it will have a salutary disciplinary effect on all labor leaders and employers who are disposed to set themselves above the law.

Thunderhead

The newest eruption of the colossus Americanus mania is the proposal to carve a 500-by-400-foot monument to the Sioux Indians in the Black Hills of South Dakota. A disciple of the late Gutzon Borglum is pressing a plan to sculpt an effigy of Chief Crazy Horse on Thunderhead Mountain, and he appears to have won local Chamber of Commerce backing on the theory that the project would attract tourists. Since the mountain is in the Harney National Forest, the matter has been taken up by the Department of Agriculture and, as an item pertaining to the Indians, by the Department of the Interior.

Such a grotesque manifestation of the billboard complex ought to be stopped dead in its tracks. Despite the fact that the plan is privately financed, the Government has a responsibility to prevent the marring of national forests, and this includes the carving up of mountainsides. Already Mount Rushmore, only a few miles from Thunderhead, has been given over to sculpture. That is enough. A statue of Crazy Horse would add nothing to the natural lure of the Black Hills. If a real memorial to the Sioux is desired, it can be achieved with considerably more simplicity and less garishness. Indeed, the best possible memorial to the Indians is the protection of the areas of scenic beauty inherited from them against man-made desecration.

LINES TO A TOO-FAT ROBIN

'Twas cherry-ripes, I think,
That made your big mouth grow so orange-pink;
My Montmorecies, and my Richmonds, too,
At evening not quite ripe, but lost to view
When with my pail I came at early morn',
Just wakened by bird-bugled notes of scorn.
What worm-food grew the spots upon your breast?
Are you the only one that left the nest?

I pick you up, you flute a wild alarm;
You are not safe, there's many a thing might harm.
I toss you toward a low branch of the tree,
You flap no wings, just drop, and scold at me!
You are not hurt, you struck a mossy place,
But your parents both fly, shrieking, in my face.

Old Robins, hark to me!

Bring him just dandelion puffs for tea,
Or seeds from maples—some such soaring things
That will reduce his fat, and grow some wings,
The while I keep my cat
Locked in the sweltering house, to save your brat.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Lilypons Postoffice

I comment on the G. L. Thomas, jr., letter in your issue of June 15.

The Lilypons (Md.) postoffice was not established at the suggestion of the Postoffice Department. It was established at the request of the owners. Department files will confirm this.

Mr. Thomas did secure a large number of letters and telegrams from responsible citizens. He said Senator Tydings asked him to get them. I asked the Senator whether this statement was correct. He said, "I might have suggested it." He admitted that they were "inspired"—not genuine expressions of interest.

I personally interviewed 41 of the senders. None was given the facts. All 41 told me that had they known the facts as set forth in the postal inspectors' report they would not have permitted the use of their names.

Mrs. Eleanor Bourke was postal clerk and acting postmistress at Lilypons for many years. She resigned as of March 31, 1949. The following paragraph from her letter of resignation to First Assistant Postmaster General Burke gives complete answer to Mr. Thomas' letter.

"Your inspectors told the truth. This postoffice serves no one but George Leicester, sr., and George Leicester, jr. Their own families do not get their mail here. Business mail is serviced here. All mail is sent to Adamstown and is cleared from that postoffice."

I am a member of the group who believe this postoffice should be closed. I base my feeling on the report made by postal inspectors stating that it serves no interest except the Three Springs Fisheries and the Thomas Supply Co., owned by George Leicester, sr., and George Leicester, jr.; that it has no other patrons; that it was in an isolated place, with no one living on or near the property; that its discontinuance would work no hardship.

In a letter dated October 5, 1948, Senators Tydings and O'Conor agreed with this report and recommended discontinuance of the office.

Lilypons has become a symbol, an outstanding example of Government subsidy to individuals, paid for by the public which derives no benefit from it.

I do hope that everyone who reads this letter will write to his Senators urging that all of these subsidized offices be eliminated wherever they are located.

Barden Bill

In his letter of July 1, attacking the Barden Bill, Representative John E. Fogarty (R. I.) approvingly quotes Cardinal Spellman thus: "I believe in help for all needy children, including Catholic children whose parents prefer to give their children religious education."

It is thoroughly understood—even by the hierarchy — that public funds cannot legally be used for parochial schools, and that the only way parochial pupils may directly benefit from such funds is through giving the funds the status of "welfare" grants to the child—not to the school. In legislatures and courts, the Catholics have—with some success—fought to have transportation, textbooks, and health services transferred to the "welfare" category. A number of States have refused to accept the transfer, two Western States having barred transportation in the past few months. The Catholics will probably not appeal these cases for fear of losing the fingerhold of legality they obtained when a deeply riven United States Supreme Court in a tortured 5-4 decision, upheld them on transportation a few years ago.

These "welfare" services — if they are such—cannot also be "educational," and, if they are not "welfare," they cannot legally be granted to parochial shools. It is this legal fogbank that the Barden bill avoids by confining its grants strictly to unquestionably educational purposes. Obviously, such grants can only go to public schools. The bill simply does not provide funds for "welfare purposes to any children—public or parochial. However, it does not prevent the States from using their own funds for such purposes.

In cutting itself free from the highly controversial now-it-is-now-it-isn't "welfare" field, the bill acquires a peculiar two-fold genius. First: it is a genius for avoiding the sin that Federal legislation must avoid—discrimination. Should it follow the lead of the Senate bill and permit the use of Federal funds for "welfare" purposes according to each State's individual practice, we would have a situation wherein Federal funds authorized under a single piece of legislation were granted to parochial pupils in some States and denied them in others. Second: it is a genius for preventing its funds from being used to do violence to one of America's most fundamental safeguards of freedom—that complete separation of church and state which our founders designed, and which our legislators and courts have preserved.

"Clearance And Cleanup"

We were delighted with your July 5 editorial reminding your readers of the need for both clearance and cleanup of slums.

There is one point, however, which seems to me to need a change of emphasis. The Board for Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings must be called in before the enforcement procedure can really be made to work. That board can take action only after a building has become so hazardous and dilapidated that it is usually no longer worth rehabilitating. The emphasis is then placed on condemnation, vacating of the premises, and tearing the structure down.

But for every building in that condition, in the District, there are thousands of occupied dwellings which are structurally sound, yet unfit for human habitation. Why wait until a house is too far gone to merit repair? And why, with the housing shortage still so much with us, drag the tenant into court—perhaps even throw him in jail overnight—because he can't find a place to move to when the house he lives in has been condemned?

What is needed, of course, is a set of simple yet comprehensive housing regulations such as those adopted by Baltimore. They provide for sufficient authority vested in the Health Department to demand that buildings for human occupancy be maintained according to certain minimum strandards of health and safety. The Commissioners have the power to make such regulations.

Our public officials are still talking around the subject of cleanup, while plans for clearance and redevelopment have just been given another setback with the House Appropriations Committee's rejection of a request for money to start the Marshall Heights project.

HILDA CLOUD.
Executive Director, Washington Housing Association.

"Fair Trade"

After reading your "Fair Trade" editorial of July 5, I feel the necessity of replying thereto.

It would be well to point out at the outset, that the New York court did not declare fair trade as such unconstitutional, as implied in your editorial, but rather declared that because of an improper delegation of legislative functions to the State Liquor Authority, it was compelled to rule as it did. It did not declare the invalidity of the general State Fair Trade Law.

There is every indication that, in the event the Court of Appeals of New York does not reverse the lower court, the Legislature will make the necessary changes to meet the court's objections and reinstate the State Liquor Authority's powers.

It is further interesting to note that Florida, after the court declared the fair trade law unconstitutional, immediately passed a new Fair Trade Act to meet the court's technical objections.

As for the further fair trade objections raised in your editorial, permit me to inform you that fair trade acts are expressly legalized in 45 States. In addition, many States, Illinois, California, New Jersey and New York among them, have legislation similar to that proposed in H. R. 1386.

I quote from the New York State Liquor Authority's report to the State Legislature for 1947:

"After hostilities ceased and as the impact of increased supplies became effective, the authority's surveys indicated the existence of conditions similar to those preceding the 'price war' episode during the late 30's. . . . During June, 1947, the authority finally drew, adopted and promulgated its rule 26 which relates to mandatory fair trade contracts . . . the rule is calculated to foster and promote temperance and to provide for a more orderly distribution of alcoholic beverages." And again: ". . . results up to the end of 1947 have been in general satisfactory and encouraging."

In addition, administrators of the various States having similar fair trade laws have expressed complete satisfaction with the workings of the law and have found that there has been a favorable acceptance of the statute.

Your editorial further states that the price of liquor would be upped. If you mean by that alcoholic beverages which today are being sold below cost, you are right. But if you mean that merchandise which is in fair and open competition with similar merchandise will be raised in price, you are mistaken, especially in the liquor business, which is so highly competitive.

In conclusion I think it can be safely stated that the prices that would be established under fair trade and which would prevail in all retail liquor stores would result in a per capita savings in expenditures by persons in the District for alcoholic beverages.

Washington Calling

Loyalty Hangover

IN THIS apace recently the details of the loyalty case against Mrs. Anne V. Alling were told. On the most flimsy hearsay reports, most of it on the level of guilt by association, Mrs. Alling had been found disloyal by a regional loyalty board and removed from her position in the "blind pool" of the Veterans' Administration where she did routine typing having nothing to do with secrecy.

It is good to be able to report that the top loyalty board has now cleared Mrs. Alling and ordered that she be restored to her position. Presumably she will be compensated for the eight weeks that she was suspended on a finding of the fourth regional loyalty board that she was disloyal.

While it is good news that what was so obviously an injustice has now been corrected, the fact remains that there should never have been an "Alling case." The cost in time and money of Government officials, to say nothing of the misery endured by the principal in the case, must be put down as a total loss to democratic government.

If Mrs. Alling had been everything that was alleged and a great deal more—the front and center of a Communist "apparatus"—she could have done the Government not the least harm. Nearly blind from a series of eye operations, she transcribed dictaphone records of letters relating to veterans' insurance.

AS THE record of her case showed, Mrs. Alling is a woman of independent and inquiring mind. Her religious background gave her an idealism that more conventionally minded people might have considered fuzzy and sentimental.

Even before the top loyalty board, she maintained her independence of thought, refusing merely to recant a political heresy with the proper words and phrases. That may have been misguided in view of the fact that her livelihood and her reputation were at stake. But it seems to me to be a decidedly American trait and I, for one, am glad that it still survives.

Letters have come to me indicating that the Alling case is not an isolated instance. They recite similar examples in which trivialities, gossip and malicious tale-bearing have been magnified out of all proportion and used to destroy men and women who protest their loyalty and their innocence of any wrongdoing.

One fact emerges that has, it seems to me, a direct bearing on efficiency in Government quite apart from considerations of ethics and justice. In the record of every Government worker who has been investigated beyond the routine of a standard check, details of the investigation are set forth.

That is to say, no matter how completely he has been vindicated nor how absurd and baseless the charges were shown to have been, the investigation trails after him throughout his Government service. It is a stigma stamped on the individual for his entire Government service.

TAKE THE case of a Government employe vindicated after a preliminary loyalty investigation. Because of his special skill and excellence he is to be transferred to a more responsible position in another Government department. But the division chief in the other department takes due notice of the loyalty investigation and being timid—or prejudiced — he decides against what might be a risk at a time when suspicion and fear are rampant.

So the Government employe does not get the transfer and his abilities are not used to the best advantage. This is not theory. It is happening in Government today as a result of the intense preoccupation with the loyalty search.

The time has come, in my opinion, quickly to wind up the loyalty program except as it covers employes in secret or restricted work. This last would be a small fraction of the whole. At the same time it should be possible for the Civil Service Commission to order a purge of the files of individual employes, removing so-called loyalty data that is obviously irrelevant and even downright ridiculous.

In the Judith Coplon case the Government proved it has ample resources for apprehending an employe engaged, as the trial demonstrated, in traitorous acts. The voluminous evidence broke down the defendant's frantic effort to find an alibi for her action. With such safeguards as were shown in that case, we should no longer feel it is necessary to look nervously over every Government employe's shoulder every day.

Senate Oleo Bill

How about that sleeping pill some of the Senators appear to have given the oleo-tax-repeal bill? I have been informed that it was favorably reported out of committee and is now "on the Senate calendar." I have been unable to find out if that necessarily means that the bill must, sooner or later, come to a vote; but I very strongly suspect that it does not mean anything of the sort.

I am quite convinced that unless the newspapers and the voters get busy again—and now—that the bill will die a natural death, as it has been doing in the past, and as many Senators fully intend it shall do again.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Business Of Politics

AGAINST the vast panorama of world events, it may seem a rather trivial matter that the Alien Property Custodian is negotiating with Swiss interests for a final disposition of the General Aniline and Film Corp. The negotiations are necessary, because the Swiss company, I. G. Chemie, claims to own most of General Aniline. But Alien Property Custodian David Bazelon asserts that General Aniline was in fact German-owned and therefore fairly seized by the United States in wartime.

If and when a settlement is made, General Aniline will be sold to private purchasers by the Alien Property Custodian. Victor Emanuel, the financier who fancies politicians almost equally with race horses, is mentioned as a likely buyer. Another claimant is the Remington Rand Corp. Since the company made nearly nine million dollars net last year, it is worth having.

ALL THESE facts might better appear on the financial page, if it were not for one significant point. The history of General Aniline, since it was taken over by the United States Government after Pearl Harbor as a concealed asset of I. G. Farben, has been a strategically political history. In the beginning, it was a main prize in the embittered contest for control of enemy assets between former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and former Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley.

Morgenthau had the edge initially, and named General Aniline's first governmentally chosen president and board of directors. The Morgenthau epoch in General Aniline did not last long, however. In 1942, Crowley got what he wanted, and was named Alien Property Custodian with full authority. Almost immediately the Morgenthau-named president of General Aniline, Robert E. McConnell, and all the Morgenthau-named directors, were tossed into the discard.

They were replaced by a new group with what can only be called a strong Victor Emanuel flavor. And this was really not so surprising, since the man who chose them, Leo Crowley, has always been so close to Emanuel that he is now comfortably installed as president of Emanuel's big utilities combine, Standard Gas and Electric.

THE NEW president of General Aniline was George W. Burpee of the Emanuel-connected firm of management engineers, Coverdale & Colpitts. Another director was William H. Coverdale of the same firm. Another was Louis Johnson, the present Secretary of Defense, who was also named a director of the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. when this aviation company was controlled by Emanuel. A little later, Emanuel himself came onto the General Aniline board. So did his great crony, the President's court jester, George Allen. So did our prosperous but not strikingly brilliant Ambassador to Guatemala, Richard Patterson, who was also made a Consolidated Vultee director in the Emanuel era.

This was not all. Burpee received a rather generous raise in salary, from the $33,333 per annum paid to McConnell, to $50,000 per annum. Meanwhile, Louis Johnson, although already fairly busy as a partner in the important law firm of Steptoe & Johnson, was concurrently named president of the General Dyestuffs Corp. This is a sort of corporate Siamese twin of General Aniline, holding most of the larger company's patents. Johnson's salary, which he drew until 1947, was also set at $50,000 per annum.

IN 1947 when Johnson stepped out as president of General Dyestuffs, his firm of Steptoe & Johnson was named as general counsel both of General Aniline and General Dyestuffs. The appointment was profitable, bringing in more than $120,000 in fees in the first couple of years. Steptoe & Johnson remain on the job.

There was a change in the management of General Aniline, however, late in 1947. In that year, in the course of a struggle with Howard Hughes, Jack Frye lost his place as head of the great, politically active Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc. Frye was and is close to former Postmaster General Robert Hannegan. Hannegan is reported to have said a word to Attorney General Tom C. Clark, whose department now includes the Alien Property Custodian's office. At any rate, George W. Burpee ceased to be General Aniline's president, and Frye fell out of TWA into a very soft General Aniline mattress.

He was made president of General Aniline at $50,000 a year, and concurrently president of General Dyestuffs at $25,000 a year. Then last year, when General Aniline showed a large additional profit, his salary was raised to $72,000, so that he now receives altogether $97,000 a year from the two companies. Meanwhile, although Frye has brought in some new men, at least four Emanuel-connected directors remain on the General Aniline board. Thus it is to be presumed that everybody is happy. Politics, in truth, can be both happy business and profitable business.

Appeals Court Adopts New Procedure

The United States Court of Appeals will give high priority to criminal and habeas corpus cases appealed in that court, Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens announced yesterday.

Particular attention, Judge Stephens said, will be given to cases that involve a legal point or precedent that may be applied to cases pending in the lower courts.

In announcing changes recommended by a five-man committee, Judge Stephens also said that District Court judges will stay executions of persons convicted of capital offenses until all appeals have been made to higher courts.

New Procedure

Under the old procedure, a District Court Judge had to postpone the date of execution and set a new date each time an appeal was filed or there was a delay in hearing the appeal.

Now, the trial judge, when he imposes sentence and fixes a date for execution, will direct that the execution be stayed until both the United States Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court have acted on any filed appeals.

The new system also provided that when a capital conviction is confirmed by the Court of Appeals, its clerk will notify the Justice Department's Pardon Attorney to expedite filing of any petition for clemency.

Time Limit Set

To further expedite criminal cases, counsel for the appellant must apply to the official court reporter for the transcript of District Court proceedings within three days after notice of appeal is filed and must notify District Court within 20 days of the records he wants filed in the Appellate Court.

Previously no time limit had been set for these steps as long as they were taken within the 40-day limit set for filing appeals after notice of appeal was given. The change also provides that typed instead of printed copies of the court reporter's transcript may be used in capital cases and in other criminal cases at the court's discretion.

Judge Stephens said the changes were recommended by a committee composed of Judge Henry W. Edgerton and Wilbur K. Miller of the Court of Appeals, and District Court Judges Matthew F. McGurie, Henry A. Schweinhaut and Richmond B. Keech. The changes were approved at the June meeting of the Judicial Conference for the District of Columbia Circuit.

D. C. Prewar Personnel Rules Return

The Commissioners yesterday ordered District government personnel policies brought back to prewar standards, as follows:

1. Most initial appointments are to be made probational.
2. The probation period is lengthened from six months to one year.
3. An efficiency rating is to be rendered by department heads six months after appointment.
4. Permanent status will be accorded to "war service" or "indefinite" appointees who have satisfactorily completed probationery periods.

Johnson Denies Trying to Get Radio Man Fired

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson said yesterday he never "tried to get" the job of a radio newsman because of a broadcast which he said contained "misstatements."

The Secretary denied a report that he and the broadcaster, Willard F. Shadel of the Columbia Broadcasting System, clashed in anger Wednesday over the matter after Johnson had testified before the House Armed Services Committee.

He acknowledged that he told Shadel the broadcast contained "lies" but he said the word was too strong and he should have said "misstatements."

Johnson told reporters yesterday he heard a broadcast by Shadel in which there were "misstatements" regarding his order stopping work on the Navy's proposed giant aircraft carrier.

The Secretary would not say when the broadcast was, nor what the misstatements were. He said the incident is closed as far as he is concerned.

He acknowledged he had talked with some CBS officials about the affair, but not with the intention of getting Shadel in trouble. If Shadel is in danger of losing his job, he added, he will assure CBS he did not intend his complaint in that way.

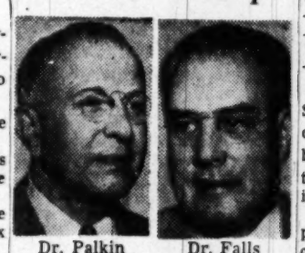
Lewis, Operators Agree To Continue Coal Terms

Philadelphia, July 7 (AP).—Continuation of the terms of the current contract was agreed on today by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and the Nation's anthracite operators.

No time limit was set for ending the present terms as representatives of the UMW and operators recessed after selecting a negotiating committee.

The date and place of the meeting will be announced later.

New Officers Of Dental Group



Dr. Palkin — Dr. Falls

Dr. W. M. Falls Heads Dental Examiners

Dr. W. Marion Falls, 46, of 4851 Sedgwick st. nw., past president of the D. C. Dental Society, has been elected president of the District Board of Dental Examiners, it was announced last night.

The society is an independent professional group while the Board of Dental Examiners, created by the Dental Practice Act of June 6, 1892, is a five-man official body of the District government. Its duties consist of examination and licensing of dentists and dental hygienists, and regulation of professional practice here.

Elected secretary-treasurer of the board was Dr. Joseph R. Palkin, 55, of 4701 32d st. nw., who served as president for the fiscal year which ended June 30. Other board members, appointed by the District Commissioners for five-year terms, include Drs. W. W. Wyman, David J. Fitzgibbon and Woodson T. Birthright.

County Wins Title to 20 Lost Bicycles

The county won the "battle of the bicycles" yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court. The court directed that the 20 battered bicycles, lost throughout the county in the past several years, be distributed to needy children.

Court action was brought by the Arlington County Board to gain clear title to the unclaimed bicycles.

They will be turned over to the Department of Public Welfare. The Arlington Kiwanis Club will repair them, and the department will distribute them to children of needy families.

Lodge Wants U. S. to Pay For Presidency Drives

Legislation to provide for financing presidential campaigns through the Federal Treasury was introduced yesterday by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.).

His resolution contemplates outlawing the present system of paying for such campaigns with private contributions collected by the political parties.

Action Deferred on Bill To Aid Southern Korea

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday deferred action on a bill authorizing a 150 million dollar aid program for Southern Korea, pending testimony from military experts.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) was confident the program will be approved. But he said members want to question military experts about "the situation from their viewpoint."

FTC Nominee Attacked for News Release

A news release put out by the Cooperative League of America bounced back at John Carson, public relations director of the league, recently named by President Truman to the Federal Trade Commission.

The release, issued on April 25, reported that Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), in attributing certain remarks to Carson, later was surprised to learn that he had "denounced the Pope as being a Communist."

Brewster termed the statement "ridiculous." He brought it up while former Congressman Jerry Voorhis, now secretary of the Cooperative League, was testifying in favor of Carson's confirmation by the Senate.

The release also said that Brewster was "led" to attack Carson by Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr. Lewis, the release said, neglected to tell Brewster that a Carson quotation Brewster had used "was a paraphrase of an encyclical of Pope Pius XI."

"If True, Deserves Apology

"I got that quote from the chairman of this committee (Senator Edwin C. Johnso (D., Colo.)" Brewster shouted at Voorhis.

Voorhie said that if that were true "then we owe you an apology."

"Couldn't you have called Senator Brewster and found out the truth?" demanded Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio).

"I think that should have been done," Voorhis replied.

Besides Voorhis, Carson was defended by the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, former political science professor at Georgetown University and prominent Catholic scholar.

Parsons explained that the Papal encyclical which had been introduced in an earlier hearing on Carson's nomination was subject to varying interpretations according to the country in which it was applied.

Called Opponent of Monopoly

He described Carson as one who is opposed to monopoly and who believes that cooperatives should be at least a part of the American free enterprise system "side by side with other industrial organizations."

Chairman Johnson entered into the questioning of Father Parsons by expressing the "hope that this hearing does not develop into a political-religious controversy. Let's not approach this question with any religious emotion."

Brewster replied by producing a newspaper column by Lowell Mellett of April 30, headed "Senate Hearing on John Carson could become trial of Pope Pius."

"The Pope's not on trial here," Brewster shouted. "Carson's not on trial. No one is on trial. We are not concerned with Carson's religious views, but we are with his economic views."

Senate Group Votes Teacher Exchange Plan

The Senate District Health and Education Subcommittee yesterday approved a bill authorizing the District to participate in the teacher foreign exchange program.

Under the measure, local public school teachers could spend a year at regular pay teaching in England, Canada, France, Belgium or Norway. A teacher from one of these participating countries would serve as a substitute teacher in a District school during the same period.

At the suggestion of Superintendent of Schools Hobart N. Corning, the subcommittee, headed by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), amended the bill to permit teacher exchange within the country as well. Corning said several school systems have entered into such reciprocal arrangements.

Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.), author of the bill, testified that over 300 teachers from nearly every State have taken advantage of the overseas program since its inception in 1946.

The bill clearly states that participating teachers will not lose their job, pay or retirement status.

Besides Corning, strong indorsements were presented by Mrs. Irene Silvey, representing the American Federation of Teachers, Local 8 (AFL), Paul Smith of the Office of Education, and Miss Selma Borchardt of UNESCO.

The subcommittee also heard brief testimony on a measure to provide flight training as an elective course in the District schools.

Corning opposed the proposal, saying he felt high school students were too "immature" for flight training and that school officials have "at least a moral responsibility" to protect their safety.

Final Action On Housing Bill Put Off to Today

Final congressional action on the Administration's vast housing program was put off yesterday until today.

House debate on the basing point price bill ran until a late hour, thereby causing the delay.

Meanwhile Representative Spence (D., Ky.) and Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) introduced legislation to speed private home construction through Government purchase of mortgages.

Their bill, understood to have Administration backing, would raise from one billion dollars to $1,500,000,000 the amount of RFC money available to provide a secondary home mortgage market.

The original billion has been used up, officials said.

The trimmed-down housing measure was approved in compromise form Wednesday in a Senate-House conference.

Truman Puts Disarmament Up to Russia

President Truman said yesterday the United States cannot make any moves towards world disarmament until Russia agrees on international control of atomic energy.

But he reaffirmed his faith in ultimate peace, saying he believed the world is moving slowly and gradually towards that goal.

Mr. Truman's news conference remarks were prompted by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's suggestion Wednesday that he follow up ratification of the pact with a "new crusade for peace."

The President said the need for peace has been the keystone of his White House service; that he has made a continuing crusade for peace since he took office in 1945, and would continue to do so.

The President added that the disarmament question is now before the United Nations. When the phase covering international control of atomic energy is agreed to by all nations, discussions can be held, but any talks before then are impossible.

Heat Shoots Vegetable Prices Up

Price tags on many green vegetables and for salad makings were higher in the Washington area this weekend because of the prolonged hot, dry weather in several big growing areas.

Beans, cucumbers, cabbage and lettuce all showed varying rises in some stores, though tomatoes were down in at least one chain.

The watermelon and cantaloupe season is well in swing, however, with lower prices the result.

Meat prices are about the same as they have been for the past two weeks. Eggs generally were up a cent or two this week over last.

Capt. Lee's Record As Airmail Flier Cited at Dinner

Capt. E. Hamilton Lee of United Air Lines, who flew the early airmail routes from College Park, Md., to New York back in 1919, was honored last night by fellow airmen and Government officials.

The veteran pilot was the honor guest at a dinner at the Carlton, at which Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson cited him for his record in the development and continuous flying of the airmail. A scroll presented Lee by the Post-office Department praised his outstanding record flying the mail from Decembr 29, 1918 to June 1, 1949.

Lee flew a totalof 4,400,000 miles prior to his retirement as a United Air Line pilot June 1. W. A. Patterson, president of the airline, presided at the dinner for more than 150 members of Congress, postal officials and others in aviation.

Edwards Hits Battle as A 'Frantic' Vote-Seeker

Rival 'Promising Anything,' Candidate Tells Audience At Alexandria

Horace H. Edwards launched his Northern Virginia campaign in Alexandria last night with a defiant challenge to the Democratic "organization" candidate to stick to the fundamental issue of the gubernatorial race.

In opening a three-day swing through the Eighth District, the former Richmond mayor accused State Senator John S. Battle of "frantically seeking votes" by "promising anything."

He laid his own 2 per cent sales tax before a rally at George Washington High School, and said there is only "one issue" in this campaign.

Jerry Kluttz, who writes The Federal Diary, is on vacation. Publication of the column will be resumed when he returns.

The Campaign Issue

The issue is, he said, "How may we finance our many needs without plunging the counties, cities and towns of this State into debt, and how may we finance these desperate needs without piling up more taxes on the present subjects of taxation?"

Taxes, said Edwards, are "the lifeblood of our democracy." In Virginia, "that lifeblood is thinning, and to ignore the true situation is to refuse a dying man plasma," he said.

Battle has attempted "to bemuse you" by saying that labor is the issue, Edwards declared. He defended Virginia' "open-shop" and public utilities labor laws, but said he would draw up a labor-management-citizen committee to recommend improvements.

Edwards said his sales tax, which would be dropped after the first four years if the voters wish, will provide 30 million dollars annually for school construction. It would release surplus funds for increased teacher salaries, health and welfare funds, and better retirement plans, he said.

Earlier, Edwards told reporters he would present the poll-tax question to the voters "with no strings attached." He referred to such proposals as annual registration requirements.

He said further that he would immediately propose a constitutional amendment to lift the tax on household furniture and other personal possessions and from automobiles not used in commerce.

Edwards' opponents in the race for the Democratic nomination in the August 2 primary are Battle of Charlottesville, Francis P. Miller of Albemarle County and Remmie Arnold of Petersburg. Lone Republican contender is Walter Johnson of Northumberland County.

Tax Collector Gets Power to Ration Liquor Stamps

City heads yesterday bolstered the District tax collector's policy on rationing liquor tax stamps to wholesalers by amending Alcoholic Beverage Control Board regulations to specify that he could do so.

An amendment was adopted authorizing Collector Guy W. Pearson to limit the number of such stamps to the monthly average for the previous six months. In the case of new firms, he was permitted to estimate the proper amount.

The city heads acted on an opinion by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West that they had "ample authority to delegate" such powers to the tax collector.

Capture of Bandit Suspect . . .

1. HELD—Identified as Edward W. Hoffler, 41, a butcher, of Portsmouth, Va., this man was booked last night at Tenth Precinct stationhouse for the robbery of an Acme grocery store, 1652 Columbia rd. nw. Police said his arrest meant the "closing" of two other cases of daring grocery store holdups

2. SUSPECT'S CAPTORS—Police Pvt. Ernest G. McClanahan (left), of 6704 Gude ave., Takoma Park, Md.; and John P. Gerardi, of 4200 Kaywood dr., Mt. Rainier, Md., both of Tenth Precinct, examine the automatic pistol they found in the basement where they captured the alleged grocery store bandit yesterday

3. VICTIMS—John Lieb (left), store manager, of 3203 10th st. nw., and Mrs. Anna Tobin, check-out clerk, of 3033 16th st. nw., were closed in the Acme store's icebox by the bandit suspect after he had the store's money. Lieb told police the man forced him to open safe and put money in paper sack customers were S. L. Levy, 1416 Euclid st. nw., and Charles Barbour, 1673 Columbia rd. nw. However, as he stopped to line up two meat department clerks, Levy escaped into the basement of the store.

Bandit Caught In 15 Minutes

The two meat men were R. J. Chaney, 3105 Fayette rd., Kensington, manager of that department, and Joseph A. Bishop, 1423 Girard st. nw., who had arrived only two hours earlier to act as relief man. These and the other three were herded into the refirigerator .

The bandit slammed the icebox door, but it did not catch completely. The occupants were able to work their way out within five minutes.

The man, Lieb said, took his keys and locked the front door as he walked out.

An elderly woman, whose name police have not obtained, apparently saw the holdup and ran to the Embassy Drugstore, three doors away, and gave an alarm. Other passers-by picked it up, and police received several telephone calls. By the time the bandit started westward on Columbia rd. on foot, he was pursued by an undetermined number of persons.

They said he walked with a shambling, bowlegged gait. That, plus his shining bald head, attracted attention.

Meanwhile, Privates McClanahan and Gerardi of Squad 102, of the Tenth Precinct, were just dismounting from their squad car in the 1400 block of Newton st. nw., nearly a mile away, to answer a call to stop a fight.

At the radio call about the holdup, they jumped back in their car and drove to the scene. More than a score of men and boys by that time were seeking the bandit.

Chaney Bishop

Meatmen put "on ice"

"We jumped a fence and looked all around the alleys and areaways," McClanahan said. "Then we came back to Columbia rd., and went in another way. Finally, we came to a doorway that went into a stair leading to an apartment house boiler room (at 1736 Columbia rd.). We went down."

Gerardi took it from there.

"Mac had the light and I got my gun out. We spotted this guy crouching by a boiler. Mac had the light on him and we told him to come out.

"He said, 'Don't shoot. Don't shoot. I give up.'

"The two paper sacks with the money were on the floor beside him. We looked for a gun. And it was in a little metal vessel you usually find in a kid's bedroom. It was a small automatic, and loaded."

When the two officers, victims, witnesses, and pursuers arrived at the Tenth Precinct Station, Inspector Lloyd Kelly, assistant superintendent of police, personally commended Privates McClanahan and Gerardi for the capture.

Among the pursuers were Marine Sergt. J. C. Bonner, 1669 Columbia rd. nw.; Joel Hoffman, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hoffman, also 1669 Columbia rd.; Arthur Herzog, 1919 Calvert st. nw.; Richard A. Scribner, 2606 Mozart pl. nw.; Jerry Cohen, 1736 Columbia rd., and D. V. Maiorca, 2524 17th st. nw.

After Hoffler was formally charged with robbery, he was questioned and, according to Lieut. Otto P. Fuss of the robbery squad, admitted the holdups of two Safeway stores here. One was at 2440 Wisconsin ave. nw., on May 27, resulting in about $900 loot, and the other on January 4, at 3228 Wisconsin ave. resulting in $1816 loot.

Lieutenant Fuss said Hoffler admitted he left Portsmouth, Va., Wednesday night and drove to Washington in an auto he purchased with the loot from the Safeway robberies.

Alexandria Court Clears Alley Homes

Judge Convicts Owner, 5 Tenants; Officials Ordered To Take Action

Alexandria Police Court Judge James R. Duncan yesterday ordered swift action against persons maintaining dwellings in violation of city sanitation laws.

Duncan acted as he convicted the owner and tenants of alley garages in Delaney's ct. for maintaining or living in structures without sanitary facilities.

Owner William M. Brown of 908 Princess st., was fined $100, suspended for two years if his tenants left by last night and that no one else lives there. The tenants, William Bates, 47; Dolly White, 30; Viola Curtis, 42; Inez Wilson, 38, and Viola Gibson, 41, each was given a suspended fine and ordered off the premises.

'Get Busy and Check'

Duncan passed sentence after inspecting the dwellings and finding garbage and human waste scattered over the area. The garages have no windows, water, heating or sanitary facilities.

"I am told this condition is only one of several similar ones in the city," Duncan said to A. Clarke Slaymaker, city sanitarian who had brought the charges. "Get busy and check the other places."

Duncan also commented from the bench that the cases before him pointed up the necessity for some sort of low cost housing program in the city. At a hearing Wednesday the garage tenants had admitted conditions were bad, but said they had no place else to go.

'Cheaper Than to Build Hospitals'

"Everyone knows these conditions exist," Duncan said. "But no one does anything about them. It is far cheaper to clear slums than to build hospitals and prisons."

Slaymaker told reporters he is trying to close up 20 or 30 other garages where conditions are just as bad. City police have been asked to be on the lookout for other similar cases.

Brown had told Duncan he had bought the garages a year ago from City Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim. Bendheim said yesterday he had rented the garages only as storage space, never as living quarters.

Big Wheaton Apartments Plan Revealed

Plans to erect a $1,500,000 garden-type apartment with 180 units in Wheaton, Md., were revealed last night at hearings on three petitions for rezoning before the Montgomery County Council sitting as a district council in Silver Spring.

The proposed site covers 14 acres on the north side of old Bladensburg rd. between the Wheaton shopping center and the WTOP transmitter.

Parcels of the land are owned by William J. Freas, owner of Suburban Motors, Silver; Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Abavadikian and Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Blundon. Freas was said to be a prime mover in the development plan.

The landowners, represented by Attorney John R. Reeves, asked that the area be rezoned from residential A to residential C. The request was unopposed.

FBI Records Identify Woman Killed by Truck

Prince Georges County police yesterday reported they have identified the woman struck and killed Tuesday by a truck on the Washington-Baltimore blvd. at Berwyn.

FBI fingerprint records revealed she had been known under five names. They were: Vivian Maybelle Hilton, Vivian C. M. Hilton, Vivian Vargs, Sue Elizabeth McCraw, and Sue McCraw. Her last address, the FBI said, was in Raleigh, N. C.

Edwin C. Cissel, identification officer for the county, said she will be buried in potter's field, unless her body is claimed by Saturday. She was apparently an itinerant, he said, about 35 years old.

D. C. Man Accused of Blackmail After Police Set Careful Trap

A carefully laid police trap, in preparation since Sunday, brought about arrest of a District man yesterday on a charge of blackmail against a State Department employe.

Shortly afterward, in the same case, two brothers were arrested by Prince Geoorges County police and District detectives at their home in Mount Rainier. They were held last night at the Hyattsville police station in lieu of $1500 bond each on charges of robbery by force.

Complainant is Gail G. Burnett, 29, 20 Chesapeake st. ne.

The District man arrested is Stafford D. Lowry, 22, of 808 Xenia st. se., and the two Mount Ranier men held are John A. McConaty, 23, and Thomas E. McConaty, 20, 3705 Eastern ave.

Burnett went to Lieut. Edgar E. Scott of the District Police robbery squad Sunday, with the story of the alleged blackmail attempt. He said he and Lowry struck up an acquaintance Saturday night at 17th and I sts. nw., and the two went in Burnett's car, at Lowry's request, to the McConaty home.

After they and the McConaty brothers were there a short time,

Lowry

Burnett

Burnett told police, Lowry began to "slap me around." Subsequently, he said, he was tied with neckties, placed on the floor, and $9 taken from his wallet.

He told officers Thomas McConaty was left to guard him with a rifle. This turned out to be a shotgun, which they confiscated yesterday, police said. Lowry and John McConaty returned, he said, after buying a camera and flash bulbs at an all-night drugstore in the District, forced him to disrobe, and took indecent pictures of him.

On threat of disclosure of the pictures, Burnett told police, the three forced him to agree to sell his auto and give proceeds, above a debt to a finance company, to them.

He was then released, he said. He then reported the happenings to Lieutenant Scott, he said.

In conjunction with Lieutenant Scott, the trap was laid. Police said a series of telephone calls from Lowry to Burnett occurred since Sunday. Arrangements were made, Lieutenant Scott said, to deceive Lowry into thinking Burnett would have $800 from the auto sale ready yesterday.

At noon yesterday, Lowry by telephone directed Burnett to proceed by taxicab at 2 p. m. to E. Capitol and Bates sts., there to meet Lowry, police said. Lieutenant Scott was in waiting with six robbery squad detectives and a policewoman, Detective Sergt. Ruby Brandt.

Burnett handed over an envelope containing $60, some in marked bills, then signaled the officers. Lieutenant Scott said Lowry threw the money on the ground, but later claimed it was a "loan."

When a search of the neighborhood failed to reveal the other two, District police contacted Prince Georges County police. Together they went to the McConaty home where they arrested the brothers and confiscated the shotgun.

Gun Scuffle Victim Dies; Suspect Held

GEORGE BURNS

Held in shooting

A coroner's jury yesterday held George Burns, 32, of 59 I st. nw., for grand jury action in the fatal shooting Wednesday night of Harry M. Mauz of the same address.

Mauz, an oil burner serviceman, died at 12:15 a. m. yesterday in Casualty Hospital of a gunshot wound just below the heart, inflicted about 3½ hours earlier in a scuffle with Burns over Burns' .38-caliber revolver.

According to Mrs. Pearl Mauz, the victim's wife, and Jake N. Lee, another witness, they were sitting with Mauz in the Mauz's basement apartment when Burns, who lives on the third floor, came down to light the hot water heater which serves the whole house.

He was wearing his revolver in a holster, as he often did because of his fear of prowlers, they said. He told Lee he was going to blow his brains out, Lee and Mrs. Mauz testified.

While Lee went into the kitchen, Mauz told Burns to put the gun down and tried to take it from him. Three shots were fired, Mrs. Mauz testified.

Burns denied threatening Lee and testified Mauz came after him with a butcher knife when he lighted the heater. The gun went off while Mauz was trying to push it toward him, he declared.

Mother of 10, Facing Eviction, Appeals to Truman for Aid

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

What do you think when you have 10 children, your husband earns $40 a week, and you are losing the roof over your head?

Because Mrs. Mary L. DeVille, 33, doesn't know the answer to that question, she has written President Truman, asking "in almost sheer desperation" to "do something for me."

The buildings in the alley are being torn down to clear a site for an additional Senate Office building. Many already have been razed.

The irony of the situation is that the Senate voted a month ago not to build the new structure, at least not immediately.

"I've been looking ever since the first of May when we got the eviction notice," Mrs. DeVille said yesterday.

"We should be out of here in a week or two weeks," she said, "because they are really getting around to this place.

"We have four rooms now. The Housing Authority would not give me six rooms. They said at first they didn't have it, and then said that was too small a unit for my family anyway. They said I would need at least 8 rooms."

John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, said "19 families applied to us from Schott's alley.

"Three were ineligible: one because the family's income was too high; one because it was a single man, and the third, this family, because it was too large.

"It is a question first of overcrowding," he said. "Even if all the children were all of one sex we couldn't put more than three in one little bedroom—that would mean at least four bedrooms, with both sexes.

"It is a question of vacancy, too. We don't have many three-or four-bedroom units. There is just nothing we can do for the present.

"We are helpless until the Housing Act of 1949, now in conference, is implemented and we can build larger dwellings."

Of the 16 eligible families in Schott's alley, Ihlder said, two families found their own housing, eight have been provided dwellings by NCHA, and "six are still on our list—and we are giving them first priority."

Said Mrs. DeVille: "I have been to a number of real estate agents, but I can't find a large enough place—especially when you have only a small salary. Offers for property for sale mean that I must raise at least $750 or $1000, which I cannot raise."

Mrs. DeVille, whose husband works for the Army Map Service as a packer, said she had had no answer to her letter from the White House, "but I saw by the paper that the President was out of town. Maybe he'll help."

Court Upholds Scott Ruling On Saturdays

The Municipal Court of Appeals yesterday upheld Judge Armond W. Scott in his opinion that Saturday afternoon is no holiday so far as parking meters are concerned.

Judge Scott gave his opinion March 5, when he found William P. Doing, an attorney of 4106 46th st. nw., guilty of parking on New York ave. nw., next to a meter that had a red flag up. The offense was on Saturday afternoon of February 26. Doing was fined $3.

The meter bore a sign limiting parking to one hour except on Sundays and holidays, and Doing contended that Saturday afternoon is a legal holiday and cited a negotiable instruments section of the District Code.

The Appellate Court ruled that the general public does not consider Saturday afternoon as a "holiday" and therefore the public is not misled by such signs on parking meters. It held also that Saturday afternoons are not holidays as defined in the traffic regulations.

Feller to Face Lie Detector Test in Tipsy Driving Case

After several court appearances on a charge of driving while under influence of intoxicants, Everett Feller, 40, of 1714 West Virginia ave. ne., is going to get a lie detector test.

It's something he has wanted ever since December 17 last, when he was arrested behind the wheel of an automobile that had been in collision with one driven by Joseph Fairchild, 22, of 313 Washington blvd. se., at Good Hope and Naylor rds. se.

Feller told police that although he was behind the wheel when they appeared on the scene, he had just switched places with the driver at the time of the accident. The driver, he said, was Mrs. Jean Fleming, 21, of 336 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Fleming, he related, had no driving permit, so he changed places with her.

Skeptical arresting officers, Pvts. James W. Latimer, of Eleventh Precinct, and Lynwood Kelly, of Fourteenth Precinct, charged him with passing a stop-sign and driving while under the influence of intoxicants.

He was found guilty on the first charge in the Traffic Court of Judge Thomas D. Quinn, who withheld sentence on the second charge, and granted Feller's request for a jury trial.

Feller was convicted on the second charge on April 13 by a jury in the court of Municipal Judge Walter Casey.

Feller asked for and was granted a new trial, Judge Casey setting the time as June 15.

Meanwhile, Feller had struck a bargain with Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King. If a lie dectector test showed he was lying about who was driving he would, he said, plead guilty at once. On the other hand, King agreed to nol-pros the drunk driving charge if the test showed Feller to be telling the truth.

It stood that way on June 15 when, no lie detector in sight, Judge Ellen K. Raedy agreed to postpone the case until yesterday.

King had finally located a lie detector, but not in time to put it to work on Feller, he told Judge Raedy. Judge Raedy accomodatingly set a new date for trial, July 28.

2 Undertakers Seek to Bury Body of Victim of Stabbing

A District Court judge will be asked, probably today, to decide who will bury the body of Nathaniel Nuttingham, about 30, a former Federal Works Agency guard.

Robert Robinson, an undertaker of 1313 6th st. nw., brought suit yesterday against Frank A. Mena, master of the District morgue, to compel him to surrender Nuttingham's body to him. A show-cause order against Mena, signed by District Judge David A. Pine, is returnable in District Court at 10 a. m. today.

Nuttingham died July 3 of a stab wound suffered a few hours before. Authorities cannot locate any next of kin.

Mena said yesterday that Robinson and another undertaker, Taft Williams, each appeared with purported releases and claimed Nuttingham's body for burial. Each told him, he said, that groups of friends had raised funds for the burial.

Deputy Fire Chief Post Slated to Go To Sutton

Popular Fireman Seen as Choice For Post Vacated By Mayhew

Battalion Chief Millard H. Sutton, 57, who used to chase fire engines as a kid, is slated to be appointed deputy fire chief by the Commissioners this week, it was learned last night.

One of the two deputy chief posts has been vacant since the recent appointment of former Deputy Chief Joseph A. Mayhew as chief engineer.

Chief Sutton, who has had experience with just about all types of fire apparatus and stations, has been an acting deputy chief since August, 1942. He is regarded as a ruggedly competent firefighter.

A 220-pound, cigar-smoking 6-footer, Chief Sutton grew up next door to No. 13 Engine Company at 10th and G sts. sw. He was "born and raised on the fish wharf" where he worked as a clerk before joining the fire force 33 years ago. He was promoted to sergeant in 1924, lieutenant in 1930, captain in 1932 and battalion chief in 1942.

He's a Mason, a member of the Fifth Street Baptist Church, and past commander of the Police and Fire Department Post No. 29, American Legion.

Cabbie Sought For Light on Sailor's Death

Montgomery County detectives last night were trying to find a Washington cab driver who they hope can help solve the bludgeon murder of John Little, 18-year-old sailor whose body was found Saturday beside a tavern near Rockville, Md.

Police believe that two men murdered Little, then caught a cab about 2:30 a. m. Saturday near Rock Creek pkwy. and Constitution ave. nw.

It was near there that a blood-stained car was found half submerged in the Potomac River. The blood in the stolen car was the same type as the sailor's blood.

Saw Two Hurrying Away

A Public Buildings Administration guard told police Tuesday that he saw two men hurrying from the vicinity where the car was discovered early Saturday.

The guard said he heard a crash about 2:30 a. m. and a few minutes later saw two men scurrying by. He said one man, about 6 feet tall, was carrying a small hand bag and was wearing a maroon sport shirt. His companion was shorter, the guard said.

Two men, one wearing a maroon shirt, were seen standing about 50 feet from a sailor on Route 240 in Rockville about 1 a. m. Saturday. All three were trying to hitch a ride, a woman from Gaithersburg and a Rockville truck driver told police.

Thieves Carry Off Safe Containing $3000, Narcotics

Thieves early yesterday carried off a 200-pound safe containing nearly $3000 and a small amount of narcotics from an East Riverdale pharmacy, Prince Georges County police reported.

Detective Richard A. Pearson said the thieves entered Patrick's Pharmacy, 5620 Edmonston rd., about 6 a. m., by forcing the front door.

The safe contained $2,272 in cash, $600 in postal notes and $113 in stamps, Pearson said.

Also in the safe was $70 worth of morphine and other narcotics, Pearson said. He reported the robbery was discovered by Edward V. Dunn, a Capital Transit Co. bus driver, who noticed the store's door open as he drove past. The store also is a branch postoffice.

The housebreaker, whom she described as a medium-sized light skinned Negro, struck her in the face, she said, but fled out the back door when she screamed for help. Nothing was taken from the apartment, Mrs. Gustin said.

Excellent swimming, fishing and boating for property owners only. Incomparably enchanting and desirable. Established 21 years.

NEA Hits St. Louis As Convention City

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Boston, July 7.—The National Education Association, by an overwhelming vote, today declared it did not want to hold its convention in St. Louis next year because of discrimination against Negro members.

The convention, now meeting in Boston, asked its board of directors to reconsider selection of the Missouri city.

The 3000 delegates reaffirmed a stand taken in 1943 when they declared "only cities shall be selected where it is possible to make provisions, without discrimination for the housing, feeding, seating at the convention and general welfare of all delegates and teachers regardless of race, color or creed."

Mrs. Johanna M. Lindlof, 76-year-old retired New York teacher, who has taken an active part in the proceedings of the convention, severely chastised the directors for ignoring the 1943 convention stand.

Stating that action against discrimination was more important than the stand taken at yesterday's session against communism, Mrs. Lindlof said, 'It is one thing to preach democracy and another to prove by action we believe the things we preach."

Karl Berns, acting executive secretary of the NEA, told the delegates St. Louis was selected because it was the only city that had invited the convention. He said "equal" faciilties had been promised Negro delegates.

The Pennsylvania delegation countered with an invitation from Philadelphia for the 1950 meeting.

Dr. Robert Wayne Clark, principal of a Philadelphia junior high school, offered the resolution adopted by the convention. He said:

"We have fine colored teachers. We are going to stand up for them and fight."

Thirty-six Negro teachers including Mrs. Alma Hooks, teacher at the District's Cardozo High School, are attending this year's convention.

A telegram from President Truman, in which he declared he had hopes of signing a Federal-aid-to-education bill before the close of the present session of Congress was read at today's session.

Earl James McGrath, recently appointed U. S. Commissioner of Education, at a press conference preceding the meeting scored opponents of Federal aid.

"The important fact to keep in mind in the discussion of Federal aid is that those who do not favor it, however sound their reasons may be, condemn countless children to intellectual starvation," McGrath said.

In his address to the delegates, McGrath praised their stand yesterday that Communists should not be permitted to teach. He urged the teachers not to oppose loyalty oaths.

"Refusal to sign," he said, "weakens the claims of teachers to their right to teach the full truth freely."

He said that teachers have a "moral responsibility" to defend their right to discuss unpopular subjects including communism in the classroom.

"While we decry the Iron Curtain of Russia, let us not hang one around the classrooms of America," he said.

D. C. Delegates Named

Three delegates from the District were appointed to NEA committees yesterday. They will serve during the coming year.

James Taylor, president of the District Education Association and principal of the Brent and Fairbrother Elementary Schools, was appointed to the committee on resolutions. Mrs. Hooks was named to the committee on necrology and Miss Angeline Anderson, treasurer of the District Education Association and teacher at Hine Junior High School, to the committee on credentials.

Mrs. Louis Grover, McKinley High School teacher, was named alternate to the resolutions committee; Mrs. Eleanora Kidd, teacher at Stanton Elementary School, alternate to committee on necrology, and Miss Margaret Davis, teacher at Tyler Elementary School, alternate to the committee on credentials.

Three Hurt When Train Jumps Track in Georgia

Egypt, Ga., July 7 (U.P.).—The Central of Georgia's streamliner, the Nancy Hanks, hit a broken rail and jumped the track near here late last night. Three passengers were injured, none seriously.

All six cars of the Atlanta-to-Savannah train left the track, tying up the entire main line between Atlanta and the Georgia seacoast.

Gen. McIntyre Named Capitol Aide

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson yesterday announced the appointment of Maj. Gen. James D. McIntyre, USAF, as director of legislative liaison for the Office of Defense.

McIntyre succeeds Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, USA, who retired recently to become superintendent of Staunton Military Academy.

Withholding Records Jails Klan Official

Birmingham, Ala., July 7 (U.P.).—William Hugh Morris, a director of the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama, was jailed for contempt of court today when he refused to produce Klan records for a special grand jury investigating hooded terrorism.

Circuit Judge Robert J. Wheeler ordered Morris held in the Jefferson County jail until the information is made available.

The grand jury, which is expected to return a number of indictments in connection with almost a score of masked raids in this area, has been trying for two days to get a look at the Klan records. Six Klan officials have gone before the body.

Morris asserted "those records are of a confidential and personal nature.

"I don't feel that the Ku Klux Klan is on trial," said Morris. "I'd feel just as badly to reveal the Klan's secret as I would to reveal the secrets of the Masons or any other secret organization."

Errol Flynn Divorced

Las Vegas, Nev., July 7 (A.P.).—Nora Eddington Flynn, Actor Errol's red-haired wife, divorced him today, thus clearing the decks for her marriage to Crooner Dick Haymes. Haymes was divorced last month by Actress Joanne Dru.

At the Capitol

Dennis Day and Gale Robbins Have Things Well in Hand

AT THE Capitol, the stage show is so superior to the movie that it deserves first mention. Dennis Day is presenting his own company of entertainers and he's organized a solidly entertaining group of troupers.

Topping the quality performances is Day, himself, who sings, mimics, clowns around, and manages to get into nearly every act on the bill. His choice of songs ranges from currently popular ballads to his personal novelty success, "Clancy Lowered the Boom."

Featured with Dennis is the lovely Gale Robbins, promising young Hollywood starlet. You might remember her as the red-headed understudy who waited to take over Ginger Rogers' role in "The Barkleys of Broadway." She never had a chance to sing in that picture. Maybe Ginger would have been embarrassed, since Miss Robbins has an open-throated, full-toned delivery of a song which is extremely pleasureable to listen to, and she also has a facade which is satisfying to look at. We will not be surprised to see Miss Robbins become more famous in the future: when young women are as attractive as she is, they don't have to act; all they need is an admiring male audience. From the whistles of approval, and the sighs of desire evident in the balcony of the Capitol yesterday, she has that audience.

An Australian ventriloquist, named Clifford Guest, is highly amusing in his struggles with a recalcitrant dummy whose name escaped us. We might observe in passing that Guest ought to slow up in his delivery; Americans find it somewhat difficult to adjust the ear to a cockney Charlie McCarthy.

Filling out the bill are the Acromaniacs, an energetic trio whose feats of balance have a sheen of humor which makes their act better than the average one of this type, and the Mayo Brothers, a serio-comic dance team who tap-dance on one of the smallest stages we've seen in a long time.

The picture, in case you're interested but you ought not to be, is a thing called "Massacre River," starring Guy Madison and Rory Calhoun. There is only one positive quality about the film; the photography. Even that is often spoiled—the characters keep getting into the way of the scenery, blocking the view.

Enraged Griffith Fires Haefner As Nats Lose, 8-3

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

I NOTE THAT Alejandro Carrasquel, the Venezuelan pitcher, has rejoined the White Sox under the general amnesty granted the border jumpers—as if the seventh-place Chicago club was not already bedeviled by enough problems.

The Nats had Carrasquel for most of seven seasons, and it is popularly presumed that one of the reasons Clark Griffith applauded the decision to reinstate the jumpers was the fact that Alejandro was the property of Chicago and thus would not return to Washington.

POVICH

They sold Carrasquel to the White Sox back in 1946 because Manager Ossie Bluege confessed he was weary of guessing the Venezuelan's pitching mood. On the days when the big guy felt like pitching, he was something to see—with his fast ball that sneaked up on the hitter, and a side-arm pitch that baffled the right-handed batters. There was also plenty of savvy in his tireless arm.

But Bluege could never be certain when Carrasquel felt like working. "When Alex thought he was being overworked, he was pretty useless," Bluege said. "He'd go out there and pitch like he was trying to prove he was overworked."

SO THEY LET the White Sox have him at the $7500 waiver price. "I thought I'd let the Chicago club worry with him awhile," said Bluege.

Carrasquel walked into a Washington training camp for the first time in the spring of 1939, and he was around for a couple of weeks before an enterprising reporter discovered that he was not another of Joe Cambria's Cuban "finds." It developed that Alejandro was a Venezuelan who had merely been knocking around in Cuba and Central America for a decade or so.

His age was never satisfactorily ascertained. Somebody said he was 26. Carrasquel, who no spik Englees, said "Si, 26." When it was later reported that he was 34, he agreed to that also. Only one thing was certain about this tall fellow with the pock-marked face. He could pitch .

Bucky Harris vouched for that the first time he saw Carrasquel work. "I don't know where the guy learned it, but nobody has to teach him anything about pitching," said Harris.

OUT ON THE MOUND, Carrasquel was indeed, a forbidding-looking guy. He had merely to stick a cutlass between his teeth and he'd look for all the world like a Black Pirate ready to repel boarders. And he had all the niceties of pitching, knew how to keep runners tethered to their bases, and how to hide the stuff he was throwing.

With the Nats he broke in the hard way. The first time he pitched off a big league mound, the man he faced was Joe DiMaggio. Got him out on a soft ground ball. The next time Alex was called on was at Yankee Stadium, first time he ever saw the place. Bucky Harris told him to take over with the bases full of Yankees and Joe Gordon up. Unpertrubed by that situation, he got rid of Gordon easily and held the Yanks hitless to save the game.

But Harris found him somewhat undependable. On alternate starts he looked like (a) the best pitcher in the league and (b) the worst. He hit a home run far into the left field bleachers of Griffith Stadium to put himself ahead one day, and a couple of innings later he was licked by a home run by Rudy York.

"THAT'S THE TROUBLE with Carrasquel," said Harris. "You never know whether he's going to hit a home run or pitch one."

He reported to the Nats from Venezuela in 1941, after some difficulty. Two weeks overdue, Carrasquel, it was learned, was being held by immigration authorities at Tampa for lack of the wherewithal to pay the $10 "head tax." A phone call from Griffith admitted him "on the cuff." The next year, overdue again, Griffith fined him the Venezuelan version of $100 for reporting late.

It was Griffith who beat Manager Bluege to the idea late in 1945 that it would be nice to get rid of Carrasquel. Griffith watched him take a 1-0 lead over the Browns into the ninth inning, get two out and have two strikes and no balls on Lou Finney. On the next pitch, Finney homered and the Nats eventually blew the ball game.

"Dumbest pitch I ever saw," said Griffith, the old pitcher. "He ain't satisfied just to shut the Browns out. He wants to strike Finney out and walk off in a blaze of glory, so he gives him a fast ball down the middle. "That was the day Carrasquel's name went on the waiver list.

Bosox Get 13 Walks In Easy 6-Inning Win

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Two Nat pitchers tried to sabotage the Red Sox plan of making an 11 o'clock train to Boston by walking a dozen batters, but the Sockers waited patiently and walked to an 8-3 victory.

In addition to an error, which cost him a job with the Nats, starter Mickey Haefner walked five in Boston's five-run first inning and Dick Welteroth, his first replacement, walked seven more.

Dick Weik, who pitched the last two innings for the Nats, was considerably off form, walking only one. With this kind of generosity going for them, the Sox needed only five hits to bring 20-year-old rookie lefthander Chuck Stabbs his third victory.

The teams agreed not to start an inning after 10:15, but along about the middle of the seemingly endless first inning. It was even money that the opening inning would still be going on by then.

The cease fire order came in the sixth inning, much to the liking of the 6457 Griffith Stadium customers who got no thrill out of the abbreviated affair which had to be held up 23 minutes for rain in the third inning.

Nats Collect 7 Hits

Junior Stephens got two of Boston's hits, both doubles, to drive in two runs, but Bill Goodman also drove in two runs with no hits—he walked twice with bases loaded.

The Nats made seven hits off young Stobbs. Clyde Vollmer's double fetched a pair in the two-run first inning and the second of Al Kozar's three singles produced the last Nat run in the second inning.

After he had walked leadoff man Dom DiMaggio and Johnny Pesky, Haefner tossed a double to Stephens that brought in the first run of the five-run first inning.

Bobby Doerr was intentionally walked, but Haefner unintentionally passed Goodman to force in the second run. Tommy O'Brien's outfield fly made it 3-0. Catcher Matt Batts drew the fifth Haefner pass of the evening to re-load the bases, setting the stage for the play which ended Haefner's career with the Nats.

Pitcher Stobbs followed with an easy slow roller to the left of Haefner. Haefner attempted to field the ball back-handed with his gloved hand. It plopped in his glove, then out.

After a moment's hesitation, Haefner picked up the ball, hesitated again and then threw into third base where Goodman had already rounded the bag.

Chandler on Hand

Doerr, meanwhile, had come in with the fourth run of the inning.

Haefner was withdrawn at this stage and Welteroth ushered in. DiMaggio, batting for the second time in the inning, singled off Yost's glove to drive in the fifth run and also extend his safe hitting streak to 10 straight games.

Kozar's single and a walk to Stewart added up to two Nats runs in the first inning as Vollmer came through with his double.

Another walk, a stolen base by O'Brien and Batts' single brought Boston's sixth run in the third inning. Four more Welteroth walks, with Stephens' second double sandwiched in, were responsible for the seventh and eighth Boston scores in the fourth inning.

IN SHORT—Baseball Commissioner Chandler, in town for a visit, attended the not so brilliant spectacle . . . The Nats must be approaching a record for losing games hurriedly. It required only 1 hour and 48 minutes for the six innings last night and 1 hour and 26 minutes for Wednesday's five-inning defeat . . . Jake Early, brought back from exile in Chattanooga, reported last night, but too late to suit up for the game .

Lanham Drops Midget Racing

Midget auto racing has been suspended at the West Lanham Speedway until further notice because attendance does not justify paying the guarantees required by the American Race Drivers Club.

The midget programs have been held weekly at Lanham on Friday nights. Stock car action will continue at the Maryland track on Wednesday nights.

WHEN MICKEY WAS HERO—Mickey Haefner (left) was a hero when the above picture was taken during the merry month of May. He had just shut out Cleveland, 1-0, on a one-hit performance. First Baseman Eddie Robinson (right) drove in the game's only run. But last night Haefner was fired by Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats for what Griff called "indifferent" playing. After walking five in the first inning he fumbled an easy roller

'Indifference' Cited By Nat Owner; Hurler Denies Ever Dogging It

Pitcher Mickey Haefner was fired off the Washington baseball club by Clark Griffith in the midst of last night's game with the Red Sox.

In a rage at what he called Haefner's "indifferent performance" on a batted ball, Griffith repaired to the stadium office in the third inning while showers halted the game, and dictated the announcement, "Haefner has pitched his last game for us."

The complete statement of the 79-year-old club owner follows:

"Mickey Haefner has pitched his last game for the Washington club. He will either be sold, traded or released outright. I am asking waivers on him tonight.

"I will not stand for such indifferent performance as his tonight when he made little effort to field Stobbs' slow roller in the first inning.

"Manager Joe Kuhel has orders to leave Haefner at home when the team goes to New York tomorrow. If he were being retained by the Washington club, I would fine and suspend Haefner for his lack of interest in his job tonight. But he will never be seen again in a Washington uniform."

Griffith, ad libbing after issuing his statement, declared, "If no club wants Haefner at the waiver price, I'll give him away. He didn't hustle. I've always told Washington fans I'd give them a hustling team, whether or not it was a winner."

Haefner Says Ball Was Slippery

The play that outraged Griffith occurred in the first inning, in the midst of a five-run rally by the Red Sox against Haefner who was wild and ineffective. With three on base, Haefner fumbled a weak tap by Boston Pitcher Stobbs, and leisurely chose to make a throw to third base instead of to first. His throw was late.

Haefner took the news of his impending release calmly, while in the showers.

"This isn't the first time a pitcher ever made a fielding error, is it?" he asked. "If they want to let me go, I'm not going to squawk. But I was trying to handle a slippery ball."

"I want to be respectful to Mr. Griffith, but nobody can say I ever dogged it. I didn't dog it tonight. I'll let the Washington fans judge me on my record. It's his ball team, and he can run it anyway he likes. But I never did give this club anything but my best."

Griffith notified Manager Joe Kuhel before the game was over of his action on Haefner's future status with the Nats.

Haefner's name has been on the Washington waiver list previously, but in each case he was claimed and the Nats withdrew waiver requests.

On high authority, it is known that at least three American League clubs sought to sign the diminutive 36-year-old left-hander and the paradox may be that he will wind up with the Red Sox, innocent parties to his release by Griffith.

However, teams lower in the league standings than the Red Sox, including the White Sox and Browns, have first choice of Haefner under the rules. If neither of those clubs claim him, then Boston, with its desperate need of pitching, is deemed certain to claim him.

Haefner has a five won, five lost record with the Nats this season, including the defeat he was charged with last night.

Since being bought by the Nats in 1943, after winning 18 games for Minneapolis, Haefner has won 73 games, lost 77. The Nats are the only major league club with which he has performed.

Earlier this season, on the Nats' nine-game winning streak in the west, Haefner turned in the most spectacular pitching performance of the major league season—a one-hit, 1-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Indians Clip Chisox, 8-2, Behind Lemon

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians hung an 8-2 kayo on the Chicago White Sox today with only Joe Gordon failing to share in the 17-hit attack.

This potent punching and Bob Lemon's nine-hit pitching produced Cleveland's first victory in Chicago after four straight losses, before a turnout of 5186 persons.

Dale Mitchell, Larry Doby and Lou Boudreau, the Cleveland manager, bagged three hits apiece to assure the Tribe's fourth victory in the past five road games. In its latest upward swing Cleveland has won six out of its past seven games.

Laurel Racing Program Is Called Off

Laurel Raceway canceled last night's harness program due to threatening weather. It was the second postponement of the scheduled 20-night session.

After 10 full nights at the Baltimore Boulevard harness plant, wagering is up nearly 50 per cent over last year. At the moment, $2,224,343 has gone through the mutuel windows—an increase of $778,075 over the amount bet at this stage of last year's initial Maryland meeting.

Braves Bow To Bums, 5-2

Boston, July 7 (AP).—Lefty Joe Hatten rode through a threatening ninth-inning storm to hurl the top-place Brooklyn Dodgers to a 5-2 win over the Boston Braves tonight before 32,650.

The Dodgers actually clinched matters by blasting Starter Warren Spahn for three runs on as many hits and two bases on balls in the opening frame.

Pirates Beat Cards On Restelli's Hit, 2-0

Pittsburgh, July 7 (AP).—Ernie Bonham and Rookie Dino Restelli ganged up on the St. Louis Cardinals today to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 2-0 victory, their eighth win in nine games.

Bonham held the Cards to six hits and hurled the third shutout of the season for the Bucs. It was his fifth victory against two defeats.

Reynolds Goes Route For 9th Win

Philadelphia, July 7 (AP).—Allie Reynolds completed his first pitching job since May 10 as he recorded his ninth win of the year when the New York Yankees increased their American League lead to five full games, handing Philadelphia a 6-2 defeat tonight before 36,000 fans.

Reynolds set Philadelphia down with five hits and gave them a gift run in the fifth inning when he committed a balk with runners on third and second. Philadelphia's other tally resulted from a double by Elmer Valo, his steal of third and an outfield fly in the second stanza.

A Philadelphia scoring threat was snuffed out by a double play in the eighth after Reynolds had walked Wally Moses and Bill Johnson tossed Ferris Fain's grounder into left field trying for a force play at second. The Yankee Infield came up with a twin-killing on Sam Chapman's grounder and Hank Majeski rolled out to end the inning.

Hank Bauer put New York out front to stay when his fifth-inning homer, which came with two out and Reynolds resting on third as a result of a triple, broke an existing 1-1 deadlock.

New York had tallied its first run of the game in the second on a single by Johnny Lindell, George Stirnweiss' double and Reynolds' single.

New York tallied twice more on one hit in the sixth as Southpaw Lou Brissie, who had a five-game winning streak broken, passed three batters. One run crossed on an infield out and the other tallied on Phil Rizzuto's infield single. They picked up their final tally in the ninth on Joe DiMaggio's double and Yogi Berra's single.

Tigers Wallop Browns, 9-2, End Losses at 5

St. Louis, July 7 (AP).—Teeing off on Red Embree for six runs in the first inning, the Detroit Tigers coasted to a 9 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Browns tonight, terminating a five-game losing streak. Rookie Lou Kretlow limited the Browns to eight scattered hits.

The Tigers made only three hits in their big inning, but two of them were triples by Pat Mullin and Vic Wertz and Embree handed them three passes.

Ralph Winegarner, 39-year-old former coach with the Browns who just joined the pitching staff, worked the last two innings and held the Tigers scoreless.

Jimmy Creed Wins Pace

Westbury, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Jimmy Creed, owned by Silas C. Thompson of New Ross, Ind., won the $25,000 National Pacing Derby tonight at Roosevelt Raceway in a red-hot stretch battle with Grattan McKlyo.

The 7-year-old chestnut son of Frisco Forbes-Virginia Grattan barely made it to the wire by a nose over Grattan McKlyo, owned by Mrs. Ben F. Owen of Omaha, Nebr. It required a photo to separate the two horses.

Jimmy Creed, in beating 10 other of the world's fastest pacing horses in this fourth annual Roosevelt Raceway classic, stepped to a new record for the stake of 2:02 flat for the one-mile grind.

Second choice in the betting by a crowd estimated at 23,000, Jimmy Creed returned $6.30, $3.80 and $2.90 across the board.

Ken's Their All-Star

Phillies in Frenzy Over Heintzelman 'Snub'

Rowe, Russ Meyer Point to 10-3 Record

New York, July 7 .—An alleged "snubbing" of Pitcher Ken Heintzelman brought the major league All-Star game to its annual boil today, just five days in advance of the playing date.

The 33-year-old Philadelphia Phillies southpaw has won 10 games and lost only 3. But when Boston Manager Billy Southworth announced his National League lineup Ken was not listed. That left him, along with some 360 other National League players, eligible to buy a ticket into the National - American fracas at Brooklyn's Ebbets Field next Tuesday.

Roars from the Phillies' dugout at what the players called a "snub" of one of the league's top pitchers were audible all the way to St. Louis. About the mildest came from Manager Eddie Sawyer:

A couple of others weren't so moderate.

"It'll serve them (the National League) right if the American League beats 'em 45-0," one reporter quoted Pitcher Schoolboy Rowe as saying.

"This is the most outrageous thing I've ever heard of," squawked Russ Meyer. "For me, I hope the National League takes the worst beating it ever took."

Southworth, as manager of the defending National League champs, has the right to pick his own pitching staff. He named Don Newcombe, Preacher Roe and Ralph Branca of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Howie Pollet and George Munger of the St. Louis Cards, Warren Spahn and Vern Bickford from his Boston team and Ewell Blackwell of the Cincinnati Reds.

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Those who bet the "lucky" 7 and 7 combination every day had a double reason on the Thursday program. It was the seventh day of the seventh month. It hit for a $47.80 payoff. George, the veteran clubhouse waiter, was still moaning yesterday. He plays 6 and 4 every day. The combination got home in front in the two key races on the Tuesday card but the No. 6 horse in the first race was disqualified. "And just think," wails George, "it hasn't won at the meeting." When mutuel department men informed him the combination would have paid better than $150 it didn't add to his happiness. Almost every track regular has a pet number played each day regardless of the horses or jockeys involved. See you on the rail. BILL.

Oresandy 2d With Simite A Poor Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 7.—Harry Zook's Icky, winner in excellent company on the mile tracks last year, made his 1949 debut here today and had to drive to the end to win. The son of Our Boots was booted in to the finish line by Jockey Webb Snyder.

A length behind the winner came Shangri La Stable's Oresandy to be second and four lengths in advance of H. L. Townsley's Simite. Only three others competed in the test named the Hyattsville purse.

Icky's class was well known to the crowd and his odds dropped steadily. The 4-year-old finally paid $3.80 and was clocked in 1.23 3/5 for the 6½ furlongs over a slow track, the first off oval in many days.

Snyder steadied Icky after the colt broke on top. Chaffee Dee and Simite battled for the lead with Oresandy far back. Snyder sat tight and allowed the pace battle to go on. Simite finally disposed of Chaffee Dee to take a clear lead.

That was the signal for Snyder to get into real action. Icky responded and then went to Simite. Icky took command in the stretch. Then Oresandy rallied and shot forward. Apprentice Dick Lawless could not keep the filly on a straight course. She swerved in midstretch and Icky, under the whip, held her safe going into the wire. Simite was a tired third.

The day's secondary feature, the fifth race, went to G. S. Galdney's War Champ, well handled by Jockey Johnny Tammaro. Sunny South, owned by M. I. Brooks, set the pace but could not resist War Champ's closing drive. Mrs. W. L. Lytle's Conspire was third. The winner, clocked in 1:18 2/5 for the about 6 furlongs, paid $9.20.

The daily double on the 7 and 7 combination paid $47.80. Shrangri La Stable's Pharant took the first at $3.80 while J. R. Hill's Handling and A. Finley's Ghosting accounted for the second at $13.80.

Reds Beat Chicago, 7-6

Cincinnati, July 7 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds calmed down somewhat today but had enough steam to push over the winning marker in the ninth inning and defeat the Chicago Cubs 7-6 in the finale of a two-game set.

Bobby Adams and Ted Kluszewski combined to score the deciding run. Adams tripled to open the final round. After Danny Litwhiler and Walker Cooper were passed intentionally and Grady Hatton had popped, Kluszewski rapped a pay-off single, scoring Adams.

By Happy Walker

THIS WEEKEND the spotlight of boating will be divided equally between the Annapolis Yacht Club sail races and the Colonial Beach Power Boat Regatta with Saturday and Sunday crowded with full schedules at both points. By far the most popular sailing regatta of the bay area will be sponsored by the Annapolis Yacht Club with two races slated for Saturday followed by a final race on Sunday. Scheduled events include Delta, Star, Chesapeake 20's, Lightning, Comet, and Penguin classes. Many of the area's outstanding windjammers will answer the starting gun under direction of the race chairman, Prof. Carl Menekin, dean of sail racing officials.

Well over a hundred members of the Potomac River Sailing Association of Washington will be on hand to wrest some of the top honors from visiting resorts. Swelling the list of entries will be the Gibson Island Yacht Squadron and the West River Sailing Club who will make runs from their home ports on Friday to the Annapolis Y. C. to enter the weekend events.

Commodore Ridgely, club prexy, will play host to the hundreds of visitors with a reception and dance Saturday night at the yacht club. He will be aided by his staff officers. The events are sanctioned by the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association.

FOR THE POWER boat fanciers, the Colonial Beach Regatta Committee will stage their annual power boat regatta in Monroe Bay, adjacent to the Colonial Yacht Club, 57 miles down the river from Washington. The two-day affair will feature an entire day of outboard racing on Saturday with a full program of inboard races scheduled for Sunday.

Special arrangements have been completed by Chairman Martin Lunsford to give the thousands of spectators select vantage points to view the second annual running of some of the Nation's top speed artists. Entertainment, housing and meals will be supplied contestants and their crews.

Officiating at the two-day affair will be Erie Greenleaf, Bill Rogers, Chuck Gardner, Jack Anadale, Ford Walker, Earle Hildebrand and George Supplee. Assisting the committee will be Maj. Robert E. Barrett, Jack Tullock, Jack Dorsett, Maj. Norman Brewington, Ray Loveless and Frank Fragale.

Miss Jean Brooks, Queen of the Chesapeake for 1949, will be on hand to reign as queen of the regatta. Miss Brooks, a model, of Richmond, Va., was crowned Queen of the Chesapeake at the Maryland Yacht Club early this month.

King's 140 Leads British Open

Stranahan, Bulla Trail With 144s

Sandwich, England, July 7 (AP).—Sam King, the sole Briton to beat an American in the 1947 Ryder Cup matches, shot his way to the front in the British Open golf championship today with the only 69 posted in wind and rain.

His 71-69—140 gave the 38-year-old Kent County professional a two-stroke lead at the halfway mark over his closest rivals among the 30 other players—including Frank Stranahan and John Bulla—who qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

Only those with scores of 147 or better survived a bleak day on the 6728-yard Royal St. Georges course hard by the English Channel.

Two other Britishers shared second place with 142 each. They were Bill Shankland with 69-73 and Max Faulkner, a Ryder Cup veteran who once milked cows to strengthen his grip, with a pair of 71s.

Another stroke back came Roberto De Vicenzo of Argentina with 68-75—143 and Dick Burton of Britain, the 1939 Open champion, with 73-70—143.

Bulla, Phoenix, Ariz., professional now representing the Westmoreland Country Club of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, amateur, remained within striking distance with 144 each. Both had identical scores of 71-73.

Sharing that sixth-place tie with the two Americans were Jimmy Adams of Scotland, the first round leader, with 67-77—144, and a trio of British pros—Art Lees with 74-70—144, Johnny Fallon with 69-75—144, and Charlie Ward with 73-71—144.

Bobby Locke of South Africa, the favorite, slid to a 76 today after his 69 of yesterday and got in with a 145 but left himself plenty of ground to make up.

Boxing Commission Asks Congress for More Power

Having gotten its ears pinned back in court two years ago, the District Boxing Commission is now trying to legislate itself into becoming Washington's supreme court of boxing.

Through its acknowledged masters, the District Commissioners, the three-man boxing board yesterday requested ongress to vest it with the authority to "control all boxing contests" and also be specifically empowered to set dates for boxing shows.

The power to set dates got the boxing group in hot water in 1948. It denied Turner's Arena permission to stage one of its regular weekly shows in order to allow the rival Liberty Athletic Club to present one of its infrequent indoor attractions.

The Turner management protested to no avail and took the case to District Court where Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ruled against the boxing commission.

The authority to set dates, a power not specifically detailed to the commission but implied in its present by-laws and constitution, would eliminate "cut-throat competition" between promoters, the commission pointed out in its request to Congress.

The commission also asked that it be given a share of any television, radio or motion picture receipts realized from a boxing show to help defray the supervisory costs.

The present law grants the comission 10 per cent of the gross of all gate receipts. The exact financial condition of the Boxing Commisison is not known, but it appears to be in a healthy state since the group purchased a $1200 television set in the last year for the announced purpose of helping its referees and judges improve their work by watching other officials.

Explaining its demand to cut into the promoters' video or radio receipts, the commission said:

"The commission feels at the present time that with the increased use of television becoming apparent . . . that it is conceivable that contests in the future may be staged in television studios with the same supervisory costs prevailing."

The scores thus far were 6—4, 5—7, 1—0.

Beazley Fired As Manager at St. Petersburg

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 7 (AP). Johnny Beazley, former St. Louis Cardinal World Series hero, has been removed as manager of the St. Petersburg Saints of the Florida International League, Club President Johnny Burroughs said today.

Catcher Harry Sullivan, who served as manager briefly earlier in the season, has agreed to take over as temporary pilot.

Beazley was unable to lift the Class B club out of last place, after taking over from Sullivan May 15. The Saints have lost their last five games. The former star hurler also had little luck on the mound, winning only one game and losing six.

$2,500 DOWN
Rambler on 7 acres near Shirley hwy. Some 10 years ago the owner picked this site and on it recently built a simple rambling house with a 30-ft. paneled living room, 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, dining room, kitchen and large enclosed porch. Because of a death in the family, the property is for sale at $17,000, which represents the owner's investment, for about 2 acres that has been cleared, the land is heavily wooded in oak and poplar and has a picturesque brook. While this area is likely to develop rapidly, no other houses are visible from this house, so we do not recommend it for timid wives. Clear of debt and owner will finance at $100 per month.

What's the Verdict?

SPITE FENCE

Q. A widow ran a rooming house, one of whose attractions was the view across a valley from the windows of the rented rooms. Her next-door neighbor was a cantankerous retired lawyer. They argued over a trivial matter, as a result of which the lawyer built a board fence just high enough to cut off the view. His only motive was spite. The effect was to make the rooms less desirable. The widow sues to force him to remove the fence. Will she succeed?

A. In the absence of a zoning law or ordinance regulating the size and type of structure, a landowner is entitled to build anything he wishes on his property. His motive is immaterial. It is just such acts as this which led to the passage of zoning laws. If the lawyer had built a chimney from which smoke poured onto the widow's property he could be ordered to control it. But the fence being on his own property, he has a right to maintain it. The widow loses.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married Man Susceptible to Feminine Wiles, Who Fell By Wayside Once, Is Now Pursuing Scientific Research With Lady; Wife Worries

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is very susceptible to the charms of the opposite sex, he has fallen by the wayside in the past and I fear may do so again—and I suffered too much from the former experience to sit by and possibly witness a recurrence.

The immediate problem is that we are invited to spend a week at the summer home of a woman who is collaborating with my husband on a scientific enterprise, just as a pastime.

We have met the lady but once, since when she and my husband have furthered their friendship by correspondence—and they may have the highest motives. However, she being a "misunderstood wife" and I knowing human nature as I do, I sense a possibility that I might be putting temptation in their way if I decline the invitation—for Henry is "set" on going whether I go or not.

They will want to be alone to discuss their work, and naturally I want to give them the benefit of the doubt and help with their work. But to go and be a fifth wheel, left to myself much of the time, isn't a very promising outlook. I would have a most plausible excuse for staying home, as I am expecting a guest who is coming when I set a date. I must decide soon and a word from you would be appreciated. C. J.

Wife Should Be Loyal Companion

DEAR C. J.: After weighing the various considerations stated, it is my conclusion that you ought to make the visit with Henry—if he is set on going whether you go or not.

In accepting the invitation, you would be appropriately indicating wifely sympathy with his scientific pursuits, alleged; also honoring the hostess with a courteous show of altruist confidence in her purpose; and at the same time putting yourself in a responsible position to decide, realistically, whether your preliminary doldrums were groundless or justified.

If Henry is somewhat a problem-character in his susceptibility to wayside feminine charms, it's no good trying to bury your head in the sand about that. So long as you are his wife, you should act the part of married companion—assuming that's what you want to be, and that circumstances and his behavior permit.

Life Is Rough for Everybody

AND IF THE PACE he sets in double-harness sometimes leads through experiences that are painful or frightening to you, just remember that, all said and done, life isn't easy for anybody, in the sense that everyone has trials, crosses, etc., that seem large to him; but that courage in taking the next turn in the road is helpful in dealing with what's to be met.

Now back to the lady: If she is plaintively avowing a "misunderstood wife" status while soliciting Henry as a research partner, her motives sound mixed, to say the least. And if she is questing for romantic adventure with your man, all the more reason for you to be on hand, to genially indicate that you understand her very well—and see no loss to science if you sit in on all their talks. Which, of course, you should do with resolute humor, if the hostess seems willing to play you false. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Infant Care Courses Include How to Crease His Trousers

Mothers, Others Learn to Keep Baby's Powder Dry

By Norma Lanum

DO YOU know how to use the "football hold" on your young one? Know the difference between the "hour glass" diaper and the "kite fold?"

Just 'ask any one of some 2000 Washington mothers who have taken the Red Cross course in "Mother and Baby Care." They could tell you.

The course is designed for young wives now expecting their first babies—for the young matrons who never so much as held a new baby before.

Accent is on the everyday duties of caring for a new infant. First the students learn how to hold him—whether Mom is feeding him, bathing him or just sitting back and admiring him. Most popular—and practical—grip is the football hold, which probably derives its name from the similarity it has to the way a backfielder carries the ball for a long gain.

Just tuck the child under one arm with his head forward, face down. This leaves the other hand perfectly free for flipping pancakes or for other household chores. It all looks very simple when the Red Cross nursing director, Miss Lillian Adams, demonstrates the hold on 3-month-old Charles Ker Reid 3d.

Mrs. Reid 2d, an alumna of the Baby Care course, brought her son in for the class demonstrations this week.

Everybody Holds 'Chuck'

And then there's the cradle hold and the arm-and-body hold which the instructress demonstrates with "Chuck" or a life-size doll. Afterward, each student practices the various techniques.

Next the soon-to-be-mothers learn to bathe, feed and dress the baby. That's when they discover they have at least five basic diaper styles to choose from. Most unusual is the hour-glass model. This diaper, shaped like an hourglass, folds in the narrow middle leaving less bulk between the legs. It helps prevent hourglass legs for the baby, and at the same time gives extra padding where it's needed most.

Also, the "kite fold" is shown. The principle here is the same: less bulk between the legs and more padding elsewhere. But this style is made by folding the regular rectangular diaper in several unfamiliar directions. For the old-fashioned students there are the triangle fold, panel fold and square fold.

The three-day course winds up with a film on child growth and development.

On the first day of the course, before baby care is introduced, the students are given advice on how to behave until the baby is born.

They're told, for example, not to switch suddenly to flat shoes from high heels. Any change in shoe styles should be gradual so as not to injure the feet.

Not all the women taking the course are pregnant, however, so this part of the course isn't so detailed. Grandmothers and aunts of an expected baby often enroll for the classes. So do professional baby sitters.

At this week's sessions a teacher in baby care at Calvin Coolidge High School, Mrs. Ida Lou Holmes, was among the students. She signed up for the refresher course mainly to observe the Red Cross teaching methods.

There'll probably be a "Mother and Baby Care" course each week through the summer, or as often as there is the demand for one. Classes are limited to 20 women so everyone has a chance to practice the techniques of bathing, diapering and feeding the infant.

Classes held at the Walsh Center, 2020 Massachusetts ave., begin at 10 a. m. and are completed by 3 p. m. each day, allowing plenty of transportation time for the students between rush hours.

HOW to bath the baby so it's fun for everyone is shown here by Red Cross nursing director Miss Lillian Adams to two of her students in 'Mother and Baby Care,' Mrs. Francine Temko (center) and Mrs. Allene Armstrong. The 3-day course will be conducted through the summer at the Walsh Center, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Ask Anne
About Mustiness In Coat Closet

Our coat closet is directly in front of the outside door. Even when it's raining, we leave the outside door open. We have many trees in the yard and no sunshine reaches this door. Will the coats in the closet be more apt to get musty if we keep the closet door open so air can circulate, even though it's damp air, or will things get musty easier if the closet door is closed? E. E.

It seems to me that it's going to take a process of trial-and-error to get an absolute answer to this problem. Since you may not like the appearance of the door standing open, an idea would be to get one of the air-drying units (the kind holding block chemicals), place it in the closet, then try to keep the door closed as much as possible. These are not expensive, are sold in housewares sections of department stores, and are quite effective in small, closed spaces.

I lost my dear son, an only child, nearly four months ago. I have been wearing black since then, although not real mourning, but I could not feel right in colors. When would it be all right for me to make a break with white and black? I have some very nice black clothes, too hot to wear now or later as the warm weather is just here. L. D.

Since mourning customs are no longer strictly adhered to and people feel increasingly that mourning is of the spirit rather than the dress, it seems to me that you could change from all black to black and white at any time. If you would be more comfortable in it, it would be the wisest thing to do and what your son would wish, I feel sure.

When I was at a friend's house in Maryland several years ago, we had some perfectly delicious cream of crab soup. I have tried to duplicate this, without a recipe, but mine has never been as good as hers. Can you give me a Maryland recipe for this dish? G. T. A.

The following is from the United States Regional Cookbook,

Try This Attitude Test

Don't Wait Till Baby Arrives To Start Being a Good Parent

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Probably the way a mother feels toward her baby after birth is set in the mold before the baby is born.

As a prospective mother, you might well ask yourself some pertinent questions. If honest, your answers will reveal your present attitudes.

Do you look upon pregnancy merely as an excuse for being indulged?

Do you feel that you are the victim of circumstances and your husband is to blame for your condition?

Do you resent the months of social frustration which you are compelled to bear? Do you envy those who are not so encumbered and can look more beautiful and dress more fashionably than you?

Do you feel privileged by your pregnancy to exhibit any kind of disposition, because, in your condition you are supposed to be emotionally unbalanced?

Do you dramatize your desires for unaccustomed foods and expect your family at any cost of time or money or convenience, to furnish them to you?

These are all childish, unbecoming ways for an adult to act and not only will your physical condition reflect your peevish resentful attitudes, but so will your emotions toward the child you are carrying.

Not only will your family become bored with the necessity to make up to you continually for your discomforts, but your husband will feel a resentment toward the infant which is causing his home to be so unpleasant and his wife so unhappy a person.

These attitudes of both parents may survive after the baby is born. The father may decide that he will never want another child. The mother may feel that because she has "been through" so much the baby must repay her with angelic appearance and behavior.

Too often, unfortunately, a mother is unconscious of her own attitudes. She does not realize how they affect her emotions toward the baby, or make it difficult for her to accept him lovingly—no matter what he is.

It is well—at this crucial period of a woman's life—that she look at herself clearly and realize that what she does and the way she feels, now, may make all the difference between her future success or failure as a parent.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Trips to the sea or to lakes or ponds can be even more fun than usual if one has an underwater "telescope" or viewer along. Rippling water distorts things and makes it impossible to get a clear view of fish, underwater plants, and other fascinating things beneath the surface. The "telescope" held below the surface gives a clear picture.

To make such a "telescope" is quite simple. Half-inch boards made into a tapered box two feet long, four by ten inches at the big end and two by six inches at the small end, make up the "tube." A clear piece of glass is fitted into the large end and waterproofed with calking compound or putty. The "tube" should be nailed together and glued with waterproof glue. Finishing it off with spar varnish or paint protects it further against water. Handles made of broomstick and fastened about half way down will make it easy to handle.

MARTA TOREN

Meet Sweden's Marta Toren

A Lesson in Graceful Motion From a Beautiful Example

By Ida Jean Kain

EVERYBODY on stage . . . for a surprise session in beautiful movement, with a new teacher—Marta Toren, Hollywood's latest discovery from Sweden. Marta is tall and willowy and moves so effortlessly that I promptly asked for her system, and inquired if she had always had a regal bearing.

"I'd like to help every tall girl in the world," she said earnestly. "I was always the tallest girl in the class and so terribly self-conscious about it that I stooped and hung my head . . . until I learned that free, graceful movement can make a girl beautiful."

"Do you think slumping is mental or physical?" I questioned. "It's mental, then physical," she replied. Her advice, girls, is to straighten out your thinking first, and your posture will straighten up.

Think of a Ship

FEEL as if you were a ship moving through the waves—then you go straight. Your chest is the prow of the ship; your head the flag on top. This beautiful young actress emphasized keeping the middle line of the body (center of head to pelvis) in perfect balance—then every movement is perfect.

Sitting and rising, for example. By keeping the middle line straight as you lower yourself into a chair, the figure can't get off balance. Try it. Standing close to chair seat, step back with one foot so the back of leg touches the seat of chair and, keeping the middle line straight, sit down. Use the same technique in rising from the chair — put one foot slightly back, middle line straight, and come up, leading with the top of the head. For contrast, don't keep the middle line straight . . . bend. What happens? You lead with the hips. That's awkward.

The Swedish Way

SHE advocates exercise, the rhythmic, freeing kind. In Sweden, every boy and girl learns the ABC's of correct movement from the first grade on up through high school.

When Marta came to this country two years ago, to her astonishment she put on 15 pounds. She blamed it on the climate . . . but in the same breath admitted that the first time she was on her own in a drug store, the only words she could muster were "banana split." She didn't eat any more food, but what she ate was higher in calories. She tried a silly diet that made her irritable, tired and unhappy, and did not reduce her weight. So she went back to sensible eating, with 2 eggs for breakfast, and swung into rhythmic exercise, and now she's lithe and lovely and has a 22-inch waistline.

Original Buttons Can Brighten Your Summer Costumes

This summer, be as original about the buttons you buy as you are about your hats, your shoes and your purses, says the July issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl.

Explore the field of buttons and you will find a whole, exciting new continent of fashion. There are rhinestone buttons, twinkling jet buttons, cut steel buttons, bone, gilt, glass, silver, straw, polished copper, painted wood buttons, plastic, pearl and handmade ceramic buttons—and they come in every shape and size to wear at any time of day on all manner of costumes.

Be sure to use a simple basic dress for your first button experiment. As a conservative start, you might sew four gold discs of buttons, epaulet-fashion, across each shoulder. If the dress has pockets, sew another gilt circle to each of these.

Try vividly painted ceramic buttons on a tailored blouse; have earrings or cuff links made to match.

Thus, with only a needle and thread, you've increased the current interest and eye-appeal of your wardrobe.

Toasting the Bride

After the cake is cut and the drinks served at the wedding reception, the best man usually proposes a toast. He may say, simply, as he stands and raises his glass "Here's health and happiness to the lovelist of brides!" All in the group, except the bride, then rise, raise their glasses and drink the toast. If the toast is dedicated to both bride and groom, both remain seated. Then the groom replies with thanks for them both. Other members of the wedding party, and the bride's and groom's father may, in turn, propose a toast to the bridal pair, creating a gay spontaneous interlude in reception festivities.

Clement's Caters for the "Modern Bride"

Whatever your wedding plans, one tradition stands out above all the rest . . . the wedding cake. And when the wedding cake is baked by Clement's it is frosted beauty in the best of taste. See the July issue of MODERN BRIDE to learn just how dramatic your bridal table can be with a Clement's wedding cake.

Berries Are in Season —Why Not Bake a Pie?

By Lucia Brown

DID YOU ever go blackberrying, with a tin bucket over your arm and strips of kerosene-soaked cloth tied around your arms and legs to ward off chiggers?

Maybe not, if you weren't a country youngster who lived near a blackberry thicket that was a riot of small white blossoms in the spring and a mass of juicy berries in the early summer. But practically everyone knows the summer delight of blackberry eating, the fine flavor of the tart, glossy fruit.

Pies and jelly are the blackberry's most outstanding contribution to the dinner table—lattice-topped pies or cobblers with rich purple juice bubbling up over the golden brown crust—shimmering blue-black jelly, delectable on hot biscuits or muffins.

But the berries are good for lots of other things, too—in fruit salads, for shortcakes, in desserts such as Blackberry Cottage Pudding, or just supplemented with a bit of sugar and cream. Here are some recipes:

BLACKBERRY COTTAGE PUDDING

- 1½ cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 1 cup blackberries

Mix and sift dry ingredients, using ½ cup sugar. Beat egg and combine with milk. Stir into dry ingredients with butter. Mix well. Turn into greased (8-inch) loaf pan. Sprinkle with berries, then with remaining sugar. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 40 to 45 minutes. This recipe makes six portions. Serve with lemon sauce.

BLACKBERRY COBBLER

- 1½ cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ cup butter
- 1/3 cup milk
- 1 egg, beaten
- 2 cups blackberries, sweetened to taste
- 1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in butter. Combine milk and egg. Add to dry ingredients, stirring just until all flour is dampened. Pour berries into baking dish and sprinkle with tapioca. Drop batter in six mounds on berries. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate and bake 30 minutes longer. This recipe makes six portions.

BLACKBERRY JELLY

- 3 cups juice
- 4 cups sugar
- 1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare the juice, crush thoroughly about 2 quarts fully ripe blackberries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure 3 cups into a large saucepan.

To make the jelly, first measure the sugar and set aside. Place saucepan holding juice over the high heat. Add powdered fruit pectin and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, skim, pour quickly into glasses. Top with paraffin. This recipe makes about 7 six-ounce glasses.

WANT to make a blackberry cake? Use your favorite recipe for plain cake and bake it in two layers. Just before serving, spread mashed and sweetened berries between the layers, top with butter icing or whipped cream, and garnish with big beautiful berries.

HOMEMADE blackberry jelly is easy to make with the addition of fruit pectin and has a full, rich flavor that the whole family will love

For a Summer Salad

Sour cream may be flavored with salt, sugar, and lemon juice and served as a dressing for fruit salad. Orange, grapefruit, and banana slices on romaine or watercress make a particularly good salad for this dressing; sprinkle the banana slices with a little of the citrus juice to keep them from turning color.

* * *

Fruit fritters, for dessert, are delicious with a sprinkling of confectioners' sugar and a dusting of spice. Use nutmeg or mace, but dust it on sparingly.

Cooking Cues . . .

Cream puff shells with yummy apricot nectar filling make exciting fare for springtime menus. Make them miniature size for teatime treats. Make the filling with a package of vanilla pudding mix using apricot whole fruit nectar for the liquid.

If you want to stuff cabbage leaves with a meat-and-rice mixture be sure to remove the large outer leaves of a good-sized head of cabbage without tearing the leaves. Pour boiling water over the leaves to soften them so that they will not tear during the filling and folding.

* * *

A little poultry seasoning may be added to the flour or cracker crumbs in which chicken for frying or broiling is to be dipped.

* * *

Medium-sized sweet potatoes will usually bake in a moderately hot oven in about half an hour. When they are ready they may be served as is or removed from the shell and mashed with butter or margarine, salt and freshly ground pepper; a little celery salt may also be added when mashing, if desired.

Carrot Mold Is Flavor Surprise

THE RATHER unusual combination of grated carrot and shredded coconut gives this "Nectar Carrot Mold" a high rating when it comes to flavor appeal. The base of this gelatin salad is tangy apricot whole fruit nectar.

CARROT MOLD

- 1½ cups apricot whole fruit nectar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 envelope (1 tablespoon) plain gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- dash ginger
- 1½ cups coarsely grated carrot
- ¼ cup shredded coconut
- Lettuce

HEAT NECTAR with salt. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot nectar. Blend in lemon juice and ginger. Cool until slightly thickened. Fold in carrot and coconut. Turn into oiled molds and chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

This recipe serves six.

Pretty, Colorful Salad

A pretty pink and green salad to serve anytime now is made with avocado balls and juicy strawberries. Cut the avocado with a melon ball cutter or a half teaspoon measuring spoon. Serve the salad with a lemony French dressing flavored with a few crushed mint leaves.

Dress Up Your Dishes With Herbs

The idea of an "herb wardrobe," complete with a score of ingredients to "dress up" your favorite dishes, is suggested in the February issue of House Beautiful magazine.

The best ways to use herbs, in both fresh and dried forms, are discussed in detail, and the magazine even tells how you can have a fresh herb garden or grow certain varieties in a kitchen window box.

Declaring that "there's a time and place for each of these costumes for food," the article likens their specific uses to those of a real wardrobe. It calls thyme, for instance, "right for many occasions and always a mainstay;" sweet marjoram is "a chiffon, useful for our lighter moods and most effective at luncheon and tea;" tarragon is "star of the occasion, dominating the picture," and garlic is "the indispensable" of special dishes.

Shade More or Less Weight

The heavy woman should remember that any shade or material which reflects light will make her look larger and any shade or material which absorbs light will make her look smaller.

Something Different

Want something different for your next after theater or concert party? Try one of the Spanish egg recipes that Gladys Swarthout has discovered in the study of Spanish customs, costumes and tastes she made to perfect her role of "Carmen."

The talented Miss Swarthout, who sang at the Water Gate with the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday evening, likes the simple "Eggs Carmen" as well as any. It is prepared by scrambling eggs in olive oil with a mixture of red and green sweet peppers and a dash of chili pepper. Then water is added until the mixture is of a thickish soup consistency. It is then poured over toasted bread and sprinkled with grated cheese.

"Eggs a la Don Jose" are popular at the Sunday night suppers Miss Swarthout and her husband, Frank Chapman, give at their New York apartment overlooking the river. This dish takes a bit of doing. Fry lightly in a little olive oil in a small pan two or three cloves of garlic, a dozen blanched and skinned almonds and a small piece of bread. Then pound a half teaspoon of cumin, a pinch of nutmeg and a little saffron together in a mortar. To this add the fried garlic, bread and almonds and reduce to a thick paste. Add a little oil from the frying pan, a bit of salt and enough boiling water to thin the mixture. Pour into a baking dish or casserole and break carefully over it four or five eggs. Put into a quick oven just long enough to let the eggs set.

A method of frying eggs that is popular in the Spanish province of Andalusia, where the famous bull fight in "Carmen" takes place, makes them swell out like fritters. The eggs are broken carefully into a cup and then slipped one at a time into a small, deep frying pan filled with boiling oil. As soon as the egg shows the slightest sign of coloring, it is turned and cooked for 1 or 2 minutes more. It is then drained for a few seconds on a slice of fish, with which it has been lifted out of the oil. Serve hot.

How to Fix Delicious Cream of Crab Soup

by Ruth Berolzheimer (Halcyon House):

MARYLAND CREAM OF CRAB SOUP

2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon flour
2 quarts milk
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ onion, sliced
½ cup cooked celery
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups crab meat, flaked
Whipped cream

Melt butter in top of double boiler, add flour and blend. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly. Add onion, parsley and celery, and season to taste. Cook slowly until soup thickens a little; add crab meat. Serve in individual dishes with a spoonful of whipped cream on top. This recipe serves eight persons.

If M. A. B., who recently wrote your column, will put her cooking utensils back on the stove with a small amount of water (after washing out the food with a whisk broom under the faucet, of course), then rub with steel wool after water has come to a boil and been emptied, she will have no more trouble in keeping a clean shine on them. Can you tell me what words are really correct in introductions? Is it proper to say "Meet my friend, Mrs. So and So?" —G. H. J.

"Meet" is not properly used in this manner in making introductions. It's also not a good idea to call one of the people you're introducing "my friend." After all, you are thus implying that the other person is not your friend.

In making introductions, always remember that the younger person is presented to the older or more distinguished. But a man is invariably presented to a woman, no matter what the difference in age. (Only exceptions are Presidents of the United States, cardinals, or reigning sovereigns).

When you're introducing a younger woman to an older woman, you could say "Mrs. Brown, do you know Mrs. Smith?" or "Mrs. Brown, this is Mrs. Smith." Do not use Mr., Mrs., or Miss in introducing members of your family if you can possibly avoid it. A husband, a wife, son, or daughter, a brother or sister, can always be spoken of as such. For instance: "Mrs. Harris, may I introduce my husband?"

Can you tell me how the dish, Poulet a la Diable, served in New Orleans, is made? W. W. K.

POULET A LA DIABLE

1 broiler or frying chicken
Salt and pepper
½ cup fat, melted
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup soup stock
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons catchup
Paprika
1 glass white wine
2 cups mashed potatoes

Have chicken cut in serving portions; season with salt and pepper and brown in melted butter; remove from pan. Stir flour into fat; add hot water or soup stock. Cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Add next 4 ingredients to cooked sauce. Place chicken in sauce, cover pan, and simmer until chicken is tender. Turn into a casserole, and add wine; pipe mashed potatoes around the edge and across top. Brown in hot oven. Allow ¾ pound chicken per person.

Can you tell me a way to remove permanent spar varnish from supposedly washable wallpaper? W. R. C.

Varnish is very difficult to remove when the stain is old, and unless the stain is very conspicuous, I would not advise attempting to remove it. If the stain is large and conspicuous, and you have pieces of new paper to match the wallpaper, that would be the best way to cover it. If, however, you wish to attempt to remove it, try sponging with benzine. Or, making a paste of benzine and cornstarch to spread over the stain, this will soften the stain so it will come off more readily. Do not have the paste so wet the liquid soaks surrounding paper or runs down the wall. When the varnish is removed, if a grease spot remains, it can be removed by covering the stain with a paste of cornstarch and tetrachloride. Let paste remain on stain until dry, and brush away.

3 Rules For Easier Ironing

Even in this hot weather, ironing can be easy. That is if you hav good equipment and follow three easy rules suggested by the home making experts of the Woman's Home Companion.

Most important say the experts is to start with the proper equip ment. The two musts are a heat-controlled iron and a well-padde good-sized board. Second rule—now this is just good commo sense—make yourself as comfortable as possible. Wear amply cu clothes; sit if you can; if you must stand wear easy shoes and put springy mat under your feet; be sure to have the ironing board th right height for you. Third rule: take a little extra forethought t assemble time and trouble savers. Most important, say the Com panion experts, are a radio, to keep your mind as busy as you hands; a damp sponge to take care of clothes that have got too dry and a fan to keep the air stirring. There are extras like a cor holder to keep you free of tangling with the iron's cord, and plastic bag, for the dampened items, that makes the job even easie

Durability Depends on Diet

Sir Stafford Cripps Figured Half a Life on the Job Was Better Than None at All

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

BRITAIN'S Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, often gets a bad press because of the very qualities which help make him so extraordinary a public servant. He's sniped at for his almost inhuman personal austerity, kidded about strict adherence to vegetarianism. But, as is usual, there's an excellent reason behind this foible which Sir Stafford, too occupied with important matters, has never bothered to explain publicly.

In 1945, when he took over the presidency of Britain's Board of Trade, Sir Stafford commenced turning in his normal stint of 16 hours work daily. A colleague, worried about Sir Stafford's health, asked how he could work so hard and yet manage to survive. Sir Stafford explained that his durability depended on diet. During the first World War, in charge of an ammunition factory, he had overworked to such an extent that physicians concluded he could never work again. This prospect was worse than death to one of Sir Stafford's capabilities.

So he experimented and experimented with various diets, finally discovering that he could toil at regular tilt if he avoided alcohol, meat, fowl, fish. "I should have given up smoking, too," he added, "but I couldn't get along without my pipe." Lady Cripps became a vegetarian out of sheer compassion for her husband.

Preferred Bacon

The Chancellor is not without humor on the subject of his diet. Once, when a successor to a member of the Board of Trade had to be named, the choice lay between a man named Reginald Bacon (who is now in the Treasury with Cripps) and a man with a non-meaty name. Sir Stafford, then in India, had to make the decision. He cabled "Despite my vegetarian habits I prefer Bacon."

His thoroughness in undertaking any job is amazing and exhausting. When he was made president of the Board of Trade he determined to meet and speak to personally, every one on his staff. The staff numbered over 3000 who were scattered amongst nine buildings. Sir Stafford took several days, made the complete rounds, missed no one. Later, he invited them all to a meeting in the Central Hall in Westminister, told them what lay before them, invited questions from everyone.

Once he was making a speech on behalf of the British Handicrafts Exports, a nonprofit organization. In extolling the group, he said, "and it has a first-class chairman whom I've known and admired for 40 years." The chairman, needless to say, was Lady Cripps. In October 1948, the Chancellor was making a speech to a number of top-flight bankers praising women's part in Britain's tough austerity program. "Women must be praised," he said, "for their efforts in stopping husbands and other subordinates from spending too much. And I hope they will continue to exercise these controls at which they are far more adept than the government."

How to Keep Cool

Traditionally, the July issues of posh fashion magazines turn out "glammer" articles on how to keep cool, remain dainty despite soaring temperatures and generally zip up wilting allure. Prescribed measures are usually exotic, invariably expensive and range from wholesale dousing in Quel Smel cologne to rinsing sunstreaked hair in flat champagne; from doing over the whole house in unbleached muslin and dotted swiss to never lifting a finger to menial task.

However, the heat approach around Washington is far more practical. In the past few days the following easy steps have been taken by prominent persons—all of them effective: 1. The shawl collar, alpaca dinner jacket worn by Joseph Alsop. 2. The dotted Swiss evening dresses shrugged into by Mrs. Rowan Shevlin and Helen Kirkpatrick of the "Voice of America." 3. Tiny fans carried by an assortment of pretty women. 4. Herbert Ellis-ton, The Washington Post editor, sleeping on an Army cot under a spreading garden tree. 5. Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge's haircut, close-cropped and curled tight all over. 6. Mme. Henri Bonnet's cotton evening dress, backless, full-skirted, belted in patent leather. 7. Reduced menus at big dinner—cold meats, cold creamed shellfish, plain salads, desserts of nonmessy type—nicest—extra-small-sized pastries each in an individual paper shell.

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

POLLY MORAN, the veteran screen comedienne, emerged from 15 years of retirement to play a role in George Cukor's new movie, "Adam's Rib." Miss Moran had retired to Laguna Beach, and she told Tom Ewell, the actor, of her campaign for the mayoralty there. In her first campaign speech she somehow wandered to the subject of beer, and told her prospective constituents: "They say beer makes you fat, but I haven't found it so. Beer makes me lean—makes me lean on the bar, on a lamppost, on a table" . . . "Did you get a lot of votes?" Ewell asked her . . . "No," said Miss Moran, "but I sure got a lot of laughs."

ARCHIBALD PALMER, the lawyer for Judith Coplon, will base his appeal, among other things, on the fact that Government employes weren't disqualified from serving on the jury . . . To recoup his losses, because he worked without a fee, and if Palmer can get an assurance that the bar association won't frown on this procedure, the lawyer hopes to arrange a series of television programs in New York before a jury of people selected here. He would reenact the Coplon trial, with excerpts from the testimony as the script—and try to prove that with a jury from which Government employes are barred, the verdict would be not guilty.

HOWARD LINDSAY was at a party monopolized by the talk of a windy lawyer, who kept talking and talking for hours on end, overriding all attempted interruptions. Then Lindsay suddenly sat up and whispered to a man sitting beside him: "That guy's a liar" . . . "How do you know he's a liar?" asked the man . . . "Because," said Lindsay, "I just heard him say, 'And he said to me . . .'"

WILLIAM SAROYAN sat at the Stork Club with Henry Ginsberg, head of Paramount Studios, and Ginsberg heard the writer tell of his experiences at several Hollywood studios—such as telling L. B. Mayer he wanted $300,000 for a story because he figured the completed movie would cost $1,200,000 and the story is worth at least one fourth of the cost . . . "Were you ever at Paramount?" asked Ginsberg . . . "I had a humble deal at Paramount," Saroyan revealed: "I managed to get inside, and Ida Lupino's chauffeur sold me a $2 sweepstakes ticket. The cop caught us and chased me off the lot."

SAROYAN returned last week from Europe, where, in each country, he'd collect his blocked royalties and dispose of them there. Because he wasn't permitted to take any of the money out of the country, he lived in elegance during his stay. He followed a set routine at each arrival in a European capital. He'd enter a cab, ask the driver: "What's the hotel you consider hopelessly expensive?"—and then take a suite there.

Bill Gold is on his vacation and will resume "The District Line" July 18.

THE producers of "Spin to Win" are looking for singers who can sing a tune backwards—for their new program which plays a recording backwards . . . Frank Sinatra will sing at the Night of Champions, next week, on the eve of the All-Star game . . . Doubleday will publish "Dateline Washington," the National Press Club's story written by its members . . . May McEvoy and Anna Q. Nilsson, the silent screen stars, appear as extras in "Adam's Rib."

LEHAR'S "Say Not Love Is a Dream," which was the Mystery Melody guessed last Sunday on "Stop the Music," was the one used in the original audition-record when the program was sold to ABC last year . . . Joe DiMaggio no longer will give autographs to youngsters who rush out on the field.

A NOTED New Yorker, who went to the proper schools, belonged to the proper clubs and who lived in the proper neighborhoods entered a sportsman Shop where he had been a customer for years, and asked the salesman for .32 calibre bullets. The salesman opened a box, and the man fitted six of the bullets into the pistol he was carrying. "Will these do?" asked the salesman, and the proper New Yorker told him: "I'll let you know in a moment." Then he put the pistol to his head and fired two bullets . . . The salesman immediately phoned the manager of the store and told him of the man's suicide. "Two bullets, eh?" said the store's manager. "That's all right. Just put it on his charge account."

IRVING BERLIN is negotiating with Paramount Pictures for a movie to be called "White Christmas." Its theme would be the "White Christmas" song he wrote for Bing Crosby in another Paramount movie some years ago.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Snyder Wants Pound Devalued

By Drew Pearson

Before Secretary of the Treasury Snyder left for Europe he had a highly important and secret talk with President Truman in which he outlined his plans for getting the British to devalue the pound.

Cripps

This is the real purpose of Snyder's sudden trip—despite all the publicity camouflage about consultation with United States financial experts. Reason for the camouflage is that the Treasury doesn't want the British public to know that we are trying to run their currency from this side of the Atlantic.

Sir Stafford Cripps, head of British economy, had informed Washington even before Snyder left that if the United States insisted on devaluing the pound he would resign. This would probably mean a general election in England.

Three members of the Truman Cabinet also disagree with Snyder—Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan and Secretary of Labor Tobin.

Brannan and Tobin don't want to devalue the pound because the less value the pound has the less it will buy of American cotton, tobacco, pork, etc. Sir Stafford Cripps has somewhat the same thing in mind—though from a different angle. If the pound is depreciated, the British consumer will not be able to import as much food for his money—though Cripps wants the food to be imported from the British dominions and Argentina, not from the United States.

Backing up Snyder against the three Cabinet members is Paul Hoffman, head of ECA, who fears the collapse of his Marshall Plan unless the pound is devalued. In fact, Marshall Plan Ambassador Averell Harriman has been pressuring the British so vigorously, even before Snyder arrived, that lanky Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador in Washington, was rushed to London by air to help take the heat off.

Despite the strong differences within his own Cabinet, and the above ramifications, Truman gave Secretary Snyder a completely free hand in dealing with the financial crisis.

No "Senator Dewey"

Governor Dewey telephoned his old friend, Senator Irving Ives, from Albany the other day to get some advice on who he should appoint to the temporary Senate vacancy left by retiring Robert Wagner.

"Why don't you come down to Washington yourself?" urged Ives.

"No," replied Dewey, "I don't want to."

Instead, he said he was considering two alternatives—one to appoint a personal friend such as John Foster Dulles or Roger Strauss to finish out the Senate year; or to appoint a strong politician who would have a chance to win against the Democrats next November.

In the latter category he placed General "Wild Bill" Donovan, famous World War I hero and head of the OSS super-spy agency in World War II, or Tom Curran, New York Secretary of State.

Ives suggested that Dewey should appoint the latter type—one who could use the four-month period before November to consolidate his strength and try to win against the Democrats. Ives also added that, since he was a Presbyterian, he thought the new Senator should be a Catholic.

Note—Dewey also mentioned two women as possible senatorial choices—Jane Todd and Mary Dolon. In the end, he chose Dulles.

Capital News Capsules

Aftermaths of the Taft-Hartley Battle—Senator Virgil Chapman of Kentucky, who owes his election entirely to Alban Barkley, voted against Barkley and the Administration right down the line . . . there was a lot of fuss over Senator O'Conor of Maryland, who was brought back to Washington for the Taft-Hartley vote. O'Conor lived up to his advance billing and voted with the Administration. However, when the heat was off, he quietly switched over to Taft's side and voted for the injunction that he had earlier opposed. This was also true of Tydings of Maryland, Frear of Delaware (Democrats) and Lodge of Massachusetts (Republican) . . . one vote would have changed the entire Taft-Hartley picture, thus creating a tie and a chance for Vice President Barkley to break the tie. Three Senators, according to Senator Lucas, were pledged to vote with labor, but switched at the last minute—Capehart of Indiana, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, and Hendrickson of New Jersey.
